COFFEE CONTROLS

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government has placed all types of coffee under import controls until Sept. 30, 1977, in an attempt to identify the cause of the recent worldwide jump in coffee prices and to determine whether additional measures can be taken to keep coffee prices in Canada down.

The move, which requires all importers of coffee products to obtain an import licence and to refer to it for each import during the period, fulfils a requirement of the International Coffee Organization, a consumer and producing country group of which Canada is a member.

An official of the department of industry, trade and commerce said that the import licence requires importers to supply either certificates of origin or customs import forms from the exporting country for each shipment into Canada, so that Canadian officials can determine the type, amount and cost of coffee being brought into Canada.

There have been recent suspicions that part of the recent worldwide increases in coffee prices could be attributed to price manipulations by middlemen in the coffee trade.

B.C. Sales Tax To Stay at 7%

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday British Columbia's seven-per-cent sales tax won't be cut until there is a major improvement in the provincial economy and perhaps not even then.

Bennett said the sales tax, increased to seven per cent earlier this year from five per cent, was "heavy and onerous" but cited greater sales taxes in five Canadian provinces.

FOX SERVES NOTICE

Crackdown Vow On Prison Riots

Times News Service

OTTAWA — Federal prison directors have been told to take "strong, decisive and immediate" action to check any further outbreaks of destruction by prisoners.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox served notice that penitentiary officials will no longer "condone" acts like Thursday's major riot at Millhaven Penitentiary in Kingston, Ont., the second by inmates there in 24 hours. Guards used tear gas to break it up.

The newly-appointed solicitor-general said at a press conference the RCMP and Armed Forces are prepared to make a "strong, decisive and immediate response" to destructive actions by inmates in any federal institution. Inmates will be forced to live in their damaged cells and clean up after their riots, he said.

At the same time he appealed to both guards and inmates to "cool down" so that penitentiaries can function normally.

Fox refused to admit that he was embarking on a new "get tough" policy, but Thursday's action by the penitentiary service was the first sign of toughness in four recent incidents at federal institutions.

Late last week authorities negotiated with inmates of the B.C. Penitentiary for the release of a guard being held hostage and about the same time prisoners damaged and set fire to part of the Laval Penitentiary. Millhaven inmates went on the rampage Tuesday night, but it was not until the second wave of destruction at the institution that force was used by authorities.

He attributed the Millhaven outbreak to "verbal escalation of charges and countercharges." He said the prisoners'. committee there was helpful in restoring order.

Fox said he has issued orders that from now on prison authorities must "in no way" seem to condone destruction at federal institutions.

He said inmates are being told "that there is nothing to be gained by this type of behavior." The Millhaven inmates, he added, have been advised that they will have to live in their cells in the state they were left in after the riot for a while and that they have to clean up the mess themselves.

The solicitor-general said that so far he has received no evidence to support charges by the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) that there is a conspiracy among inmates to make the penitentiary system unworkable through deliberate acts of destruction. But if some evidence is found, he added, the RCMP will be ordered to investigate and charges will be laid where possible.

Fox said that the B.C. incident was different because a guard's life was at stake and the government had received the approval of "a substantial part" of the guard's union (PSAC) or negotiating for the man's release.

An administrative inquiry will be held at Millhaven.

Socred Purge Called Payoff

An NDP MLA charged today the firings of five members of the Land Commission is the first step by the Social Credit government in the dismembering of the act.

"The way I see it, the firings are part one of the dissassembling of the act and all it stands for," warned Prince Rupert MLA Graham Lea.

Lea claimed the move is a "payoff of a political debt" to the real estate industry for its cash aid to Socred finances.

"They (realtors) put money into Socred coffers. They knocked on doors during the last election. Now they are expecting to be paid off," the former NDP highway minister said.

Fired were Vic Brank, Mary Rawson, A. E. Garrish, Ted Barsby and Don Knoerr, all of whom found letters on their desks Wednesday telling them they had been relieved of their posts.

The commissioners are responsible for administration of the Land Commission Act passed by the NDP in 1973. The legislation freezes certain areas of the province as agriculture land and prohibits commercial or industrial development.

Environment Minister Jim Neilsen Thursday said they have been replaced by Sarjit Max Singh, a Surrey vegetable grower, Alan Claridge, a fruit grower from Oyama in the Okanagan, Ted Cornwall, a recently retired provincial agriculture employee now living in Williams Lake, and Raymond Kerr, a Kamloops cattle rancher.

Ralph Barichello, president of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said today he interprets the move by the government as "perhaps questioning the recommendations made by the land commission in recent decisions."

He referred to a controversial case in Chilliwack in which the town council has asked the commission to release more than 1,700 acres from the agriculture land reserve. The commission has rejected the application.

"Maybe it was getting too hot for the cabinet . . . they had received a lot of complaints from people about some of the commissions decisions."

He said the dismissals of the commissioners didn't "alarm him" but said he was surprised by the timing.

"Hopefully it will not be a retrograde step but the question we have to know is what motivated the move at this time."

Commission chairman Gary Runka, the only NDP appointee to survive the purge, said he does not think there will be any change in focus of the commission's aims and responsibilities.

"I think all the new commissioners are dedicated to preserving agriculture land," he said this morning. "But frankly it's too early to say. I only know one (Cornwall) and he's a good man."

Kerr, in a telephone interview from Kamloops today, indicated however, there could be some changes.

"I have long felt some of

No Jobless Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment edged down from 7.9 per cent to 7.8 per cent of the United States work force in September after three consecutive monthly increases, the government said today, but there was virtually no improvement in the over-all job picture as total employment also declined slightly last month.

Another Protest

PARIS (Reuter) — French trade union leaders have fixed another day of protest following a 24-hour general strike Thursday against Prime Minister Raymond Barre's anti-inflation plans.

Airport Guarded

LONDON (UPI) — Armed troops returned to London's Heathrow Airport today and set up road blocks on its 10 miles of perimeter roads. A police spokesman said the troops were at Heathrow carrying out a contingency exercise, "in view of the ever-present threat of terrorist action."

Booby Trap Fatal

BELFAST (UPI) — A booby-trap explosion killed a reserve policeman and injured four British soldiers today near Kilrea, 40 miles northwest of here. The policeman and troops were checking an abandoned auto parked just outside the Londonderry town that had been hijacked the previous night.

255 Arrested in Drug Sweep

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what was described as a major disruption of Mexico-to-U.S. heroin smuggling operations, U.S. federal drug agents Thursday arrested 255 persons believed to be key figures in 49 different illegal drug distribution networks around the country.

Beginning with pre-dawn arrests that continued throughout the day, narcotics agents swept through 34 cities and seized about 46 pounds of Mexican-grown heroin with a street sales value of more than $20 million.

New Economic Strategy Promised by Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised Thursday to announce new economic measures in the coming parliamentary session to help fight inflation.

He said new economic strategies are required in several areas, including employment policies, labor-management relations, the sharing of social responsibility, decentralization of federal operations and growth and investment.

The prime minister, speaking to a group of businessmen, said present wage and price controls would be scrapped on schedule in 1978, "or sooner if economic conditions are favorable."

"They will not be extended," he told a subdued audience of 900 who had spent the bulk of a one-day conference attacking the government restraint program. "They will end."

Trudeau said he will use the policy-previewing speech from the throne next Tuesday to announce new job creation programs, re-designed social welfare plans and the government's intention of co-operating more closely with business and labor.

Those, and other initiatives, would help reduce the risk of future inflationary explosions.

The prime minister said the government is committed to ending wage and price controls within the next two years because they had created "their own kind of economic disruption and social injustice."

$500 MILLION BEFORE DELIVERY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government will have spent more than $500 million on Lockheed Aurora patrol planes before one of the aircraft is delivered to the armed forces, a study of the contract with the company shows.

Lockheed Aircraft Corp. should receive about $697 million for the 18 Auroras that Canada is buying to replace the Argus patrol plane. Of that, $567 million will have been paid when the first aircraft are delivered in May, 1980.

While the price tag on the aircraft totals just less than $700 million, the deal will cost Canada slightly more than $1 billion. Taxes and federal spending on support for the aircraft account for the difference.

Government officials said this week there is nothing strange in so much front money being spent on a major defence contract.

But Allan McKinnon of Victoria, Progressive Conservative defence critic who is highly critical of the Lockheed purchase, said Thursday:

"If Lockheed goes belly up we are out millions and all we will have is a bunch of plane parts and equipment."

$650,000 Anti-Booze Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department will spend $650,000 of taxpayers' money telling them not to get drunk, not to drink and drive and not to accept a drink if they don't want one.

"This is not a fight against drinking," federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde told a news conference launching the campaign Thursday. "It is a fight against irresponsible drinking."

The advertising program, eating up a sizable chunk of the health department's approximate $9 million information budget, is mainly a method to bolster regulations already in force to keep drinking at reasonable levels, Lalonde said. Those include drinking age limits, controls on alcohol advertising and education programs, all of which vary from province to province.

Meantime, federal health officials are continuing a series of meetings aimed at reaching agreement on minimum standards across the country on other tools for regulating liquor consumption.

BULLET-PROOF CABS?

CALGARY (CP) — Some Calgary taxi drivers are considering installing bullet-proof shields between the front and back seats of their cabs after the death of a fellow driver last weekend, Floyd Shaw, taxi commission general manager, said Thursday.

But there really is very little taxi drivers can do to protect themsleves, Shaw said.

Drivers became concerned after police discovered the body of Ahmad Sabbagh, 23, in a ditch beside his cab Saturday morning. There were two bullet wounds in his head and his money had been stolen. Police have arrested two men in connection with the death.

City police inspector Don Nelson said eveything possible was already being done to protect the drivers.

If a driver is in trouble a code red is radioed to the company dispatcher. The message is relayed to police and a squad car is on the scene "as soon as humanly possible," the inspector said.

"But how can a driver reach for his radio when someone in the back seat has a gun or a knife jammed behind his ear?" Shaw asked.

Duncan Murder Charged

DUNCAN — An 18-year-old Duncan youth has been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment following a shotgun slaying Thursday night.

The name of the youth was withheld until he appears in court.

Police said Frederick Peter Mercer, 19, of Duncan, was shot at close range with a shotgun about 11:30 p.m. in the beer parlor of the Village Green Inn.

He died about an hour later en route to Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria.

Police said the suspect was arrested at the scene of the shooting.

Inn manager Dave Rose said today no one in the pub Thursday night saw any sign of a gun until just before the shootin .

He said patrons saw a man carrying the shotgun approach a pool table and level a blast at the victim's chest.

The man was immediately grabbed by some patrons, Rose said, and held until police arrived.

Rose said there didn't appear to be any obvious reason for the shooting.

"He just walked in and did his thing," he said of the man with the gun.

More Tankers If Kitimat-Edmonton Pipe Built

VANCOUVER (CP — Secret B.C. government documents argue that a proposed oil pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton would increase rather than decrease tanker traffic down the west coast, according to the Vancouver Sun.

The newspaper says the documents advise the provincial cabinet to reject the $450 million pipeline proposal.

They were prepared by the environment and land use committee secretariat, backed up by Environment Canada.

The 750-mile pipeline proposed by a consortium of companies headed by Trans-Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver would consist of a 36-inch line capable of transporting 350,000 to 750,000 barrels of crude oil a day from a terminal in Kitimat to connect in Edmonton with an existing oil line to mid-west refineries in the United States.

Trans-Mountain is expected to make an application to build the pipeline to the National Energy Board this fall so that construction can start in 1977, with completion expected in 1979.

Company president Ken Hall has said the pipeline would reduce tanker traffic down the B.C. coast by 50 per cent. His claim, however, is rejected by one of the documents.

In a confidential memorandum dated June 8 on letterhead of the environment and land use committee secretariat, Denis O'Gorman, acting secretariat director, says the line "would in fact increase oil traffic to B.C. with ships coming from the Persian gulf, some of them 250,000 tons in size and perhaps poorly constructed and maintained."

The memo compares the big ships with the "well maintained and constructed" 80,000 to 120,000 ton tankers from Alaska.

"The choice of Kitimat as an oil terminus will make the entire northern half of the B.C. coast vulnerable to spills," says the memo. "Difficult navigation routes and poor climate greatly enhance the likelihood of spills.

The documents also say:

—That an oil spill is inevitable, regardless of safety measure taken;

—That the schedule is too tight for the necessary environmental studies to be undertaken;

—That the proposal has few benefits for Canadians;

—That job opportunities in northern B.C. would be minimal and the social impact of transient workers severe.

A June report to the secretariat says that if the oil needs of Washington state and the midwest were combined,

$24,000 Question Finally Answered

The $24,000 question has finally been answered for city police and Vancouver Island Coach Lines officials.

The money was discovered in a suitcase in the unclaimed baggage department of the Victoria bus terminal and the 63-year-old owner located several days later in a Vancouver hospital.

Because he had not reported the money missing, it took a fair amount of detective work to track him down, but he will soon be reunited with his life savings police said.

Five days later, VICL officials opened the bag in hopes of finding some kind of indentification.

They found the owner's identity form a letter and the usual items most travellers carry — shaving gear, clothing — but they also turned up $3,209 in cash and $21,000 in bonds, along with a several siler dollars and shinplasters.

Police checked the letter's author — a London law firm — London police, the federal pension commission, Victoria hospitals, the Vancouver police and the Vanocuver bus depot.

They pieced together the story of a man who had lived for years in a London boarding house. When his landlady died, he took a bus west but got off in Vancouver while his bag went to Victoria.

He was found wandering around Vancouver in a dazed conditon and taken to hospital.

All the time he was in hospital he never said a word about his missing $24,209 until police tracked him down.

The money is being held in safe-keeping and will be returned as soon as the man is well enough to come to Victoria to claim it.

Crown Computer Corp.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett today announced the creation of a new Crown corportation, British Columbia Systems Corporation, for the undertaking of the management of planning a service for computer users in government departmens and agencies.

"This move taken after months of study means that the government is undertaking a basic centralization of control of its computer and data processing facilities and staff, a move long overdue," the premier said.

"All computing resources of staff and equipment have been un-co-ordinated through departments and agencies and amount to approximately $22 millian annually. This has resulted in many problems related to top-level neglect, lack of policy, lack of equipment and lack of qualified staff."

The premier said that under the new Crown corporation,a business-like basis of full-charging for services will take place.

the land in the freeze shouldn't have been included," he said, but refused to elaborate or give examples.

He said he was not referring to his own property — 5,000 acres of land 12 miles east of Kamloops which is included in the land freeze.

Kerr said he has never contemplated using the land for any other purpose than cattle ranching and has made no applications for exemption in the past.

Kerr, who admits he is a staunch Socred supporter "as was my father before me" said he hadn't received official confirmation of his appointment yet but was asked a "couple of weeks ago" by Neilsen if he'd be interested.

Opposition members were surprised by the appointment of Alan Claridge as commissioner.

In March, 1973, Claridge was virulently opposed to the Land Act, and referred to it at the time as "damaging disgraceful legislation ... pure robbery."

Claridge was quoted as saying farmers should have the right to dispose of their farm lands because the lands are "a form of pension ... that would compensate famers for years of substandard returns for their hard work.

"Now this (the Act) is going to be pirated away from them by the government."

Now, Lea says, he "expects the worst."

Barichello notes that only 2.5 per cent of the land in British Columbia is suitable for agruculture. He said the land in the Fraser Valley is particularly critically needed.

"They (the government) would be reneging on their responsibility to future generations if they allow this property to be blacktopped and built upon."

Meanwhile Runka has announced he will try to arrange a meeting with the new commissioners in Vancouver sometime next week.

Commission salaries set by the NDP are $36,000 a year for the chairman and $31,200 a year for one full-time commissioner with a per diem rate of $125 for the others.

copy of the contract from the supply and services department, said a study shows the government paying more and getting less than it would have before Lockheed's difficulty in raising financing scuttled a contract in May.

The contract was signed July 21 but will not be made public until the government tables it in the Commons. A copy of the contract shows, among other things:

—The scandal-ridden company has given a warranty that no bribes, gifts or other inducement have been given, paid, promised or offered to any government official or employee and no commissions have been paid in connection with the contract.

But the government has the right to cancel the contract if this warranty is violated.

—No MP is permitted "any share or part of this contract or to any benefit threfrom."

—Lockheed makes itself responsible for delivery of all essential parts of a total Aurora system, ranging from electronic ground support, through training simulators to the aircraft themselves.

—If the company falls behind schedules included in the contract, under which plane No. 18 will be delivered in March, 1981, it can be assessed damages for late deliveries of $1,350 a day for the first 30 days, $2,700 for the next 30 days and $4,050 for each day thereafter up to a ceiling of $4 million.

—In the event the company goes bankrupt the government is assured that all work done and most equipment needed to build the 18 aircraft will belong to Canada.

—If Lockheed fails to live up to commitments to provide hundreds of millions of dollars in benefits to Canadian industry, millions can be cut from the contract price of the aircraft.

Trudeau Strategy

intolerable over the longer term."

Reaction to Trudeau's speech at the Financial Post conference was mixed but generally favorable. A number of businessmen said later they were pleased with the prime minister's pledge to end the controls program.

Others said they were heartened by assurances that the government would do its best not to intervene in the economy unnecessarily.

However, Opposition Leader Joe Clark warned again in Edmonton that the prime minister may be using the restraint program "as a prelude to more permanent controls."

The current controls program should only last until the government adjusted its economic policies, Clark said.

The Conservative leader's comments were echoed a number of times during the day by conference participants here. Simon Reisman, former deputy finance minister who quit government to become a private consultant before controls were introduced, said the program should end as soon as it begins doing more harm than good.

"We are very close to that point now."

But Harvard economist John Kennth Galbraith chided Reisman and others who worried about losses of economic liberty to government.

Permanent controls are inescapable in a modern society, Prof. Galbraith said. Large companies now readily accept big union demands for increased wages because such costs can be recouped through higher consumer prices. Controls were the only method of curbing inflation caused this way.

the demand would be sufficient for construction of a Port Angeles terminal "away from the sensitive Puget Sound-Georgia Strait area."

But the report says consrtuction of the Trans-Mountain pipeline would make the Port Angeles terminal unnecessary and "the practice of shipping Alaska oil right into Cherry Point (inside the Olympic peninsula) would have to be continued."

Another secretariat memo says F. F. Slaney and Co. Ltd., consultants to Trans-Mountain, have warned "that at present the pipeline proposal offers very few advantages to Canadians and yet poses possible significant hazards."

the weather

Under the influence of a ridge of high pressure, mainly sunny skies will prevail today and Saturday over most of southern B.C. However, cloud and fog will occur in some areas on the south coast, particularly the outer coast on both days. A frontal disturbance extending from the Pacific northeast over the Alaskan panhandle will cause some cloudiness and occasional precipitation over northern coastal areas. Over the central interior, skies will be sunny except over northern portions where some cloudiness will occur.

NOT THE TICKET . . .

A 15-year-old Vancouver girl was playing both ways, as a prostitute and a policewoman.

That is, until one of her customers decided she wasn't either and took his complaint to police.

As the 48-year-old Greek customer told the story, he was at a bus stop at Keefer and Main when the girl approached him and asked if he wanted to go to a hotel.

He agreed and took her to a $3 hotel room on West Pender after a $30 price had been decided upon.

But when he asmed her to take her clothes off, she said she was a policewoman and handed him a notice that read: "I fine you $28.50 for picking up a woman cop, if you refuse to pay the fine I sentence you to 6½ weeks in prison."

The notice was signed by "Leftenant (sic) Liz Sherwood" and underneath were two yes-no boxes for fine paid and fine unpaid.

The customer decided it wasn't a fair game, grabbed the girl's purse and went to police.

Stolen Picassos Recovered

MARSEILLES (Reuter) — A French detective posing as an art collector has helped recover 118 stolen Picasso paintings worth more than $3.6 million, police said Thursday.

Southern France Police Chief Jean Mathieu told reporters here that seven persons were detained in connection with the Jan. 31 theft of the paintings from Avignon's Palace of the Popes on Jan. 31.

One of the suspects, a 40-year-old Belgian identified as Theodorus Timmers, was found dead in his cell early Thursday, an hour after being questioned.

The six others, including Hainz Tillmans, 35, of West Germany, are being held for further questioning after being caught in a police trap outside a Marseilles waterfront cafe Wednesday night.

LRB Spurns Teamster Bid To Have Pact Overturned

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Teamsters' bid to have an agreement with 94 trucking companies enforced was turned down Thursday by the British Columbia Labor Relations Board.

The Teamsters had complained to the board that all but one of the 95 companies it reached agreement with had to pay the original agreement because they have fewer than 500 employees and thus could not be brought under a federal anti-inflation board rollback.

The 95th company, Johnson Terminals, has more than 500 employees.

Board chairman Paul Weiler found that enforcement of the original agreement on the 94 companies would place them "in serious danger" of contravening the federal anti-inflation guidelines and being assessed penalties by the federal anti-inflation guidelines and being assessed penalties by the federal anti-inflation administrator.

The union had argued that an order-in-council passed in Ottawa April 15 did not bring these companies under the Anti-Inflation Board because the contract had already been signed.

The provincial board's rejection of the union argument means a difference of $7.75 million in total benefits for drivers employed by transport labor relations association companies.

The difference is between the 19.28 per cent and 13.28 per cent settlements negotiated for this year and 1977 respectively and the federal board's rollback to 11.3 and eight per cent respectively.

LABOR WAR FEARS COULD CANCEL MILL

MACKENZIE (CP) —Economic development Minister Don Phillips says labor problems in British Columbia could possibly force the cancellation of plans for a giant steel mill in the northern part of the province.

Phillips said that Nippon Kohan Kaisha of Japan, which is conducting studies regarding a site for the proposed mill, is concerned about reliable labor, he said.

The company has asked for a "stable, reliable, reasonably-priced labor supply" and the company says those conditions don't seem to exist in B.C. at this time, he added.

The four-million - metric-tons-a-year mill, located at either Prince George or Kitimat would provide about 7,500 jobs.

Mystery Disease Toll Now 230 in Africa

NAIROBI (AP) —Scientists in Africa and Europe are working to find the cause of a mystery disease which causes high fever and bleeding and is reported to have killed as many as 230 persons in central Africa.

Radio Uganda claimed on Thursday the disease, which broke out in the southern Sudan two weeks, ago, is under control and has been contained. It quoted the south Sudanese regional minister for health, Dr. Justin Nya, as counting 12 people confirmed dead. It was not immediately clear whether Nya's death count applied to the whole country or only his region. Reports from Sudan last weekend said more than 80 people had died.

In Zaire, 150 persons are reported to have died, including two Belgian nuns and a Belgian priest working in A Roman Catholic mission at Yabumku near the Sudanese border.

World Health Organization (WHO) doctors in Geneva reported the disease is marked by high fever, aches, vomiting and bleeding from the nose, mouth, ears and intestines.

In Sudan, the disease was first reported at the town of Maridi, about 150 miles west of Juba. It first appeared in Zaire at Yabunku.

A spokesman at WHO headquarters in Geneva said blood samples from Sudanese stricken by the disease are being examined in Europe.

The spokesman said WHO has received no notification of the disease from Zaire so far. Nor could he confirm reports from Nairobi that the infection was fatal within 24 hours.

NEW COLOR COPIER AS GOOD AS GOLD

NEW YORK (AP) — A color copying machine used to counterfeit U.S. currency and other documents has become a growing worry for government agencies and financial companies.

"The problem can be horrendous," said Martial Lester, vice-president of Jeffries Banknote Co. of Los Angeles, which specialized in printing financial certificates. "It's an area we are very concerned about."

The copier is the Xerox Corp. Model 6500, which has been on the market since May, 1973.

Lester said it might be used to forge such documents as payroll cheques, corporate dividend cheques, stock certificates, food stamps, travellers' cheques and certificates of deposit.

"It has not taken on any great bounds at this time," he said. "It's in the embryonic stage. The threat is there. That's the danger."

Lester said he knew of only two forged documents "of any consequence" made with the Model 6500. He declined to elaborate.

In Washington, a Secret Service official said:

Bank Girl Murdered Before Extortion Try

MONTREAL (CP) — A 22-year-old woman found bound, gagged and strangled to death in a basement bedroom of her parents' home Thursday is the second person in the Montreal area to die this year in connection with a bank extortion plot.

Giselle Goulet was found lying face down on her bed, her hands tied behind her back with a leather strap and her legs bound with wire. A wire noose around her neck was connected to her legs, leading police to believe strangulation occurred while the woman was trying to free herself.

Police said she had been punched repeatedly in the face and rags were stuffed into her mouth.

Investigators were trying to trace two unidentified men seen leaving the vicinity of the house.

Miss Goulet's body was found by her mother when she went to investigate why the young woman had not appeared for breakfast.

Half an hour later, the manager of a branch of the City and District Savings Bank where Miss Goulet worked as a teller received a phone call telling him to put $50,000 in his car and leave it at a designated location.

"You will not see her alive if you don't," police quoted the caller as saying.

The money was left and police staked out the area, but the cash was not claimed.

Police said they suspected the extortionists were scared off when they heard radio reports of the woman's death.

Homicide investigators had released news of the death, unaware the incident was connected to, the extortion attempt.

An Unprecedented Speech

The echoes of Prime Minister Trudeau's speech last weekend to the party faithful in Toronto seem to have died as quickly as Walter Gordon's economic policies. Yet the speech was an extraordinary event. There was the prime minister of the country admitting the governing party was in shambles. He said the Liberal party was ill-prepared to prevent Canada from splitting apart. It was becoming an eastern Canadian party perceived as representing French more than English-Canadians. And most dangerous of any political organization, it was out of touch with the grass roots.

Joe Clark has given a similar speech many times, but for the prime minister to be as candid as the opposition leader about the government takes courage. To make such admissions the prime minister is clearly desperate about Canada's future. Certainly, the country will survive without the Liberals and without their chief spokesman. But how long could a Conservative party govern a united Canada if the vast majority of its seats represented English Canadian ridings? The same thing is true of a Liberal party with the preponderance of its seats in Quebec or central Canada.

Another question which begs an answer at this uneasy juncture in our national existence is whether the corporate-oriented likes of John Turner or Joe Clark are prepared to make the necessary sacrifices to keep this country together?

Powerful forces, including it would seem, the United States government, would like to see Pierre Trudeau retired to private life. When U.S. interests indicate a preference for a new Canadian prime minister, however indirectly, it is time Canadians rethought their own feelings on the matter. It especially grates when a credible leader like Premier Bill Bennett says it is highly unlikely the country will divide if the federal bilingualism program fails. It is interesting how carefully the B.C. premier chose his words. Of course the specific issue of bilingualism will not crumble the country. But the issue of bilingualism precipitates the bigotry that could eventually tear the country asunder. Despite its failures and rigidity, it must succeed if this country is going to be united and viable in the 21st century.

Failure to achieve English French harmony in this nation cannot help but result in a weakened nation. When one cornerstone is removed the edifice is all the more prey to other disasters. The language question has so obscured our vision we can't see the cracks in our national purpose. None of our major political parties is really national. The Liberals are hanging on by the skin of their teeth in the west. The Conservatives have four representatives in Quebec. And the NDP have one seat east of the Ontario border.

The real question facing Canada today is whether it can live up to its rhetorie of a free democratic society based on two cultures and languages. It is a question we have managed to evade or paper over through a rebellion, two conscription crises and the War Measures Act. Because of economic, foreign and internal questions the time has come when we finally look ourselves in the eye.

In the October issue of the Reader's Digest an international poll claims Canadians are one of the most happy and satisfied peoples in the world. That may be part of the trouble. Even when our prime minister warns the nation is on the edge of an abyss, we sneer at him, and go our singleminded way, as though there was no tomorrow. Perhaps there wont' be.

Cowboys Triumph

The cowboy conservatives in the Alberta federal Tory caucus will be sniggering behind their stogies and stetsons after one of their own forced party leader Joe Clark to make an embarrassing climbdown on his expressed determination to run in the new riding of High River, which contains his hometown.

Tough Stan Shumacher, the incumbent MP who announced well before Clark that he would fight for the nomination there (both his and Clark's old ridings will disappear in redistribution next year), refused to concede to his chief.

Shumacher stared him down and Clark blinked first. Of course, Clark mostly has himself to blame since he let it be spread around that he wanted to be known, like Jimmy Stewart or Gary Cooper, as "the man from High River" and therefore had to represent the pleasant little foothills town in parliament. Naively the party leader thought the party would defer to him and make arrangements to let him run where he wished — after all he did win the leadership fair and square with votes from all over Canada.

But Conservatives co-operate? Did Sir John A. dislike spirits?

Why Clark wanted to be so indelibly associated with High River in the first place is puzzling. The votes today are in the cities, where 80 per cent of Canadians live. The leader of a party with national aspirations needs a national base, not a pleasant, sleepy little Alberta town. The west is so solidly Tory that the new boy could have plunged right into the heart of darkness and started door-to-door campaigning in a Toronto riding of his choice.

Because that's where the next election is going to be fought and won, not in the back of beyond of Alberta.

PAUL WHITELAW

Selling of the Candidates

SAN FRANCISCO — "There's a change that's come over America," chirps the soothing female voice in a television commercial, "a change that's great to see."

The jingle is upbeat, reminiscent of the Pepsi Cola song. But the product is Gerald Ford.

The selling of the president 1976 is underway, if not with a vengeance,than as an assault on the perceptions of television viewers that may be more bland than ever before. And nowhere is the assault more concentrated than in California, the nation's most populous state and a critical political battleground that could swing the outcome of the Nov. 2 election.

In addition to commercials shown nationwide on network television, Ford and Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter each plan to spend about $1 million buying "spots" on local stations throughout the state.

When it comes to blandness, Carter's advertising managers are not about to be outdone.

Negative Spots

In one commercial showing here, more than half of the four-minute and 20-second pitch consists of a song about the Democrat, who is shown campaigning and walking through the fields of his Georgia peanut farm. Between choruses, Carter repeats his famous lines about the need for goodness and fairness in government. At the end, the melodious voice simply: "Jimmy Carter. A leader, for a change."

As the Republican and Democratic commercials frame it, the central issue of the campaign is not unemployment, or national defence or tax reform of energy independence. In the first presidential election after Watergate, it is an elusive quality called "trust."

When the fall campaign got under way after Labor Day, the President Ford committee admitted that it was preparing "negative" commercials designed to exploit contradictions in Carter's views. So far, with Ford's standing in the major opinion polls rising steadily, there's been no need to use them.

It may be an indication of the closeness of the race that Carter's top advertising consultant, Gerald Rafshoon, has acknowledged that he is giving some thought to "negative" commercials.

"The commercials could be the decisive factor in states where the president and Carter are running neck-and-neck," said Ron Weber, a former advertising man working for the President Ford committee.

He noted that the budget for local

Jimmy Carter gets on evening news with appearances like this.

"spots" in California, which has 45 electoral college votes, the largest bloc of any state, is roughly one-tenth of the total $10-million nationwide advertising kitty of the Ford campaign. The Democratic presidential nominee has also budgeted about $10 million for television commercials.

By putting money in local "buys" — both candidates will spend about $5 million that way — undecided voters in swing states can be targeted more effectively.

The post-Watergate campaign financing reforms, which limit total spending by each presidential candidate to less than $22 million, have increased the importance of advertising in 1976.

"When Richard Nixon ran for re-election four years ago (spending about $60 million) we had elaborate campaign organizations in every state. We can't afford all the offices and staff this time," noted Weber, who was here with the president for the second televised debate.

The reason for the concentrated advertising of the Republicans and Democrats here is several unique political traits that make California what is known in political circles as a "media state."

With its reformist political tradition, California — unlike for instance, New York and Pennsylvania — does not have any entrenched political machine that can get out the vote on election day. Official party registration as Republicans and Democrats is relatively low, making voters in this state particularly susceptible to television advertising.

Politics vs. Lifestyle

The size of the state — 800 miles from corner to corner — also tends to make television commercials and favorable coverage on television news programs the only effective way to reach a sizable number of California's 20 million citizens. The well-publicized one-day campaign blitz that can be so effective in small states like New Hampshire and Vermont is of limited value.

Even the presence of both the president and Carter here this week for the foreign policy debate and some personal campaigning, many Republicans and Democrats suspect, has done little to divert the pre-occupation of people here with the much-vaunted "California lifestyle."

Tragic Commentary

What a tragic commentary it is on our (so-called) civilization that the labor unions and our government should have to be arguing and debating the rights, or lack of them, of every human being to earn his or her own living.

The word of God says: "He who will not work neither shall he eat." It does not say: "They who will not join a labor union neither shall they earn their living."

That is sick humanity's interpretation of it.

There was time long, long ago when labor unions were a necessity and a blessing. But those days are gone forever. Today these unions are a curse to our civilization, a deterrent to our freedom of choice and of action, the greatest single cause of inflation (the second greatest is credit cards), unemployment and unwillingness to work that has ever plagued our planet and the history of humankind.

I, a non-unionist as you can see, was receiving $3.26 per hour for a first class (the boss said so) job as janitor. Then I had to be away for three weeks. A unionist replaced me in the interim and was paid $4 per hour. The place was so dirty when I got back that it took me two full weeks to get it back into decent condition. And my wages were raised — to $3.50 per hour.

"So," you say, "why don't you join the union? You should join the union. If you were a union member you would get $4 an hour too."

And I answer: "My freedom to do the job I am paid for, to the very best of my knowledge and ability, and my right not to strike, are far more important to me than 50 cents an hour. If I get a raise in pay I want it to be because my employer considers I am worth it and he can afford it, not because a union boss told him he had to."

I have a God-given right to be paid a fair wage (fair from my viewpoint and also from my employer's viewpoint) for services rendered.

I have a God-given right to pay my way, and a God-given order to "owe no man anything but to love one another.

I have absolutely no right to live above my income, go into debt, or receive wages beyond the reasonable fair value of services rendered. And neither do you, whether you belong to a union or not.

Would you know peace, plenty and prosperity? Revoke your union membership, burn your credit cards, return your unpaid-for etceteras, learn to live within your means and "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found."

Ottawa and Victoria are doing their best but inflation is your problem and it will never be beaten while labor unions and credit cards remain in Canada.

If the Oct. 14 plots remain unchanged it will be a tragedy from which Canada will never recover and which right-thinking people will regret forever. — Rev. C. Lillian Clifton, Nelson, B.C.

Jobs for Women

I was surprised to read statements in your paper by Stan Purdy of Manpower that their Women's Day program would "answer complaints of women's lib types who say women are not encouraged to go into jobs traditionally held by men. "In fact," he says, "many women are holding non-traditional jobs in Victoria."

Mr. Purdy was obviously not aware that Manpower workers asked the Status of Women Action Group to give them names of women in non-traditional jobs, because they could find very few, and that we spent two days of volunteer time scouting out names for them. Mr. Purdy now says they weren't looking very hard. (If you have to look "hard," they must be pretty rare.)

We found only one woman apprenticed to a trade union. The carpenter's union told us the qualifications for females were "38-24-38 ... ha ha." Only Saanich and Victoria hire policewomen. Only Victoria employs women as full-time gardeners, no fire departments hire women and you have to go do Duncan to find a woman driving anything as large as a Mack truck. More women are driving buses and delivery vans and going into radio and newspaper work, but the majority of women are stuck in dead end job ghettos like banks, offices and stores for low pay and few benefits.

Opportunities may be opening up due to human rights laws, but attitudes of employers and women will not change as long as our education system perpetuates stereotypes and fails to present challenging alternatives to young women. (Right now, a "career" desplay at the Greater Victoria school board office shows men only in the pictures.)

The picture is far from rosy, but I applaud the efforts of Manpower workers to focus on this issue.—Mimi Robertson, President, SWAG, 671 Fort Street.

Homework Slaves

Fantastic food for thought. What a laugh! Generation after generation the real truth is hidden. Hidden because without a doubt each "civilized" nation across the globe hides, statistically at least, the kind of people that fill mental asylums, prisons, also causes of babbling politicians, theologians, poets, warmongers, free enterprisers, dictators, ad infinitum.

All achieving by rote persistence a dog-in-the-manger power to sway and control the yeasty masses every boiling over in conflict that will eventually blow up the dear beautiful little old earth to smithereens.

Couldn't one do a little more research into the human social aberrations and causes for same on the basis of Colman McCarthy's The Homework Slaves, included in the Times, Sept. 27?

Only rarely a thought-provoking gem surfaces in print anymore. And one could almost bet one's soul that even then only a one-hundredth of one-hundredth per cent of the literate folk read and absorb seriously the impact such an idea whould have.

Sure, the dinosaurs had their day and vanished. Other grotesquely evolved creatures too. But here we are, a super, superior creature currently wallowing in lemming fashion toward a certain global demise as sure as crackers crumble in a dropped multilingual labelled carton box.

What's it all about, Jake? Me? I found part of the easier answers in Colman McCarthy's brilliantly presented article, The Homework Slaves. So let's not put "the screws on him." — M. Anderson, 6407 Dallas Road.

Emily Carr

I have been working at the Emily Carr art centre at 207 Government Street recently, and feel there is a sad lack of interest shown in Emily Carr, her work as a painter and author and the house in which she was born and where she spent her childhood. The house is now owned by the provincial government but no funds are provided for its upkeep and necessary repairs. It is entirely run by the members of the Carr Art Centre Society, a group of volunteers and money has to be raised by them for paint and other maintenance costs.

A great many people come from all over Canada and the United States to see the house, which they find with difficulty as it is not even listed in the Chamber of Commerce brochure among the "places of interest to see in Victoria." These visitors are astonished to see the deteriorated state of the house and also the fact that there are no original paintings on view anywhere in Victoria. There are 143 paintings and drawings stored away in the provincial archives but these can only be seen by request.

Surely such a famous Canadian should have her paintings and books on view permanently in her native city? — Mrs. T. G. Ely, 1120 Beach Drive.

Ungracious

May I comment on the singularly ungracious remarks reported to have been uttered by Morran Waller, clerk to the city of Victoria. (Times, Oct. 1). Referring to those citizens who have recently been engaged in helping people in Victoria to be properly registered for forthcoming civic elections in November, he had the audacity to call them "dingalings." That a public servant should use such abusive language is quite unacceptable, especially when his insult was aimed at sincere men and women who, in support of the democratic process, freely gave their time and energies to staff registration booths and conduct a door-to-door enumeration. It is not very often that we witness such selflessness today. Why then should it be derided by a city official?

Mr. Waller is also reported to have made the criticism that "between 10 and 25 per cent of all cards submitted by outside agencies were not valid for registration." This may well be so. But does the entire blame lie at the door of the people he calls "dingalings"? The fact is that Mr. Waller's office was very backward in offering its expert advice in this matter.

When a request was made for current registration lists, so that unnecessary duplication might be avoided, Mr. Waller insisted that the volunteers should pay $5 a copy. The Municipal Act authorizes this charge, but the fact of the matter is that the volunteers were doing the city's job! Furthermore, when neighborhood residents, involved in the registration drive, asked for help from Mr. Waller's office, the advice that was received very often proved to be vague and contradictory. One group, namely the Fairfield Community Association, offered to send to Mr. Waller a number of volunteers that he himself could train. The offer was refused!

For the record, however, it should be stated that, despite the official cold shoulder, the volunteer citizens did succeed in registering a total of nearly 2,000 voters. This indicates the quality of Victoria's neighborhood citizens. — Robin K. Blencoe, 1157 Princess Avenue.

Goodwill

One again Thanksgiving gives us an opportunity to thank all those who have supported Goodwill's programs for people with handicaps. Their donations in the form of reusable or repairable clothing, furniture, appliances and household items have provided the means of training, employing and ultimately, through the sale of reconditioned articles in our stores, paying the wages of our handicapped employees.

The success of our organization is brought about by a combination of help from the public with their donations and their support of our stores, businesses with their donations and allowing us space for our collection booths and the media who have so generously mentioned our aims, our problems and our successes.

The recent fire in our warehouse could have been a major disaster but due to your immediate reaction this was averted. For this and your continuing support we give thanks to all of you. Without your help we would quite simply cease to exist.—Alec Reid, Community Relations Officer, Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped, 220 Bay Street.

Insults from City

Just a note from a local "dingaling" as called by city clerk Moran Waller (page 23 of the Times Oct. 1). I strongly object to other citizens and myself being referred to as "dingalings" when we put in hours of volunteer time to register voters. As we had to pay $5 a copy for voters' lists, not all volunteers were able to have one. So, of course, there will be some duplicates. Is it not better to register when in doubt as we are urged to do in a provincial enumeration? I cannot help but be angry after people volunteer their time and energy instead of a thank you from our city officials we receive insults. — Lem Hoover, 3125 Glasgow Avenue.

Wilson Duff: A Tribute From a Haida Carver

By BILL REID

(Reid wrote this tribute to anthropologist Wilson Duff, who died this summer, for the Vancouver Art Gallery monthly publication Vanguard. Reid is himself a descendant of the legendary Charles Edenshaw and worked with Duff on the Gallery's centennial exhibition of Northwest Coast Indian Masterworks, Arts of the Raven.)

SKIDEGATE

When Madeline (Madeline Bronsdon, Curator, UBC Museum of Anthropology) phoned and told me Wilson had died, here on the Charlottes it seemed at first just another dismal small muffled electronic sound such as we hear through the background noises of our faulty radio and TV reception, echoes of an outside world where people seem to spend most of their time killing each other or themselves. It didn't seem surprising that it had happened to someone who was an old friend and colleague. Perhaps I'll have to return to Vancouver and the University to really feel the impact of his loss.

He was supposed to come here this year, to spend a couple of weeks with me after he finished conducting a tour around the Islands to show a boatload of people the deserted village sites. Too bad he didn't make it. If you can forget their tragic history, and overlook its results, there's a paradoxical tranquility about these beautiful stormy islands that might have kept him with us for a while.

He hadn't been to the Charlottes for about 20 years, and that's sort of strange, considering that his main interest centered on the art that originated here and the people who made it. But there may have been a good reason. I think he wanted his Charlottes to be the home of the old Haidas, when the totem poles were new and the great carvers were just finishing their latest boxes, masks, rattles and all the other gear and the painting was new and bright — not a largely deserted land with a few crumbling relics of rotten wood, and a handful of fishermen and loggers and their families occasionally remembering memories as they became more and more like the world that surrounds them.

I said he was my friend, and in a way this was true. We used to get together and drink a little and very often exchange long periods of rather uncomfortable silence. That was when we tried to discuss something other than Northwest coast art. He helped me out from time to time when I was suffering from the malady that eventually caused his death, and needed sympathetic company. I tried to do the same for him with less success.

So I guess I was his friend. But I think that certainly more than me, perhaps more than anybody, his true friends were Albert Edward and Charles Edenshaw, of Kiusta, Skidegate, Naikun and Massett, and all the great artists and, as he thought, philosophers of the great age of Northwest coast art. I think he really loved them, at first as creators of beautiful things, but later, as he tried to see through the curtain of age and cultural difference, as real people, who had lived vital, interesting lives, and through their works had something vital and interesting to say to him and to us. I wish I were romantic enough to believe he was now able to really talk to Albert Edward and his distinguished nephew, and find out definitely who made what and what it was all about. And perhaps even exchange a few words with the Raven.

Wilson Duff examining argellite carving

Well, what about Wilson Duff, Professor of Anthropology? The most repeated remark is that he left a great deal undone. It's true he didn't write very much. He wanted to be a good writer, and he was, but it was terribly difficult for him, every word a hard birth after long labor.

But he was a good teacher and in his very low-keyed way, a powerful propagandist for the art of the Northwest coast people. Many wealthy dealers in primitive art in New York and London should pay tribute to the part he played in bringing this great treasure to the attention of the public and much more important, a couple of generations of students owe their discovery of this rich heritage to his enthusiasm and knowledge.

And equally as important, if there is truly a renaissance of native Northwest coast art, it is as much the accomplishment of a small group of dedicated academics, Hunter Lewis, Harry and Audrey Hawthorn, Bill Holm and others, as it is of the carvers themselves. And Wilson was certainly one of the foremost of these. For years he was the friend and advisor of Mungo Martin and later the Hunts in Victoria. He gave me my first opportunity to carve on a large scale, and become a friend and advocate of most of the younger artists. On behalf of all of us, I'd like to thank him for that.

A couple of years ago, for his 50th birthday, partly as a joke, but with some serious intent, I made Wilson a silver medallion with a Haida design on the front, and some inscription on the back giving his name and the date and describing him as a "survivor, first class." I'm glad that he wore his survivor's medal quite proudly from then on. I suppose it's ironic if he were wearing it when he died, but in a larger sense, as long as people study, enjoy, enthuse about, and come to love Northwest coast art, at least some part of him will survive.

Wilson wrote as the final paragraph of the report on the salvage of the poles at Ninstints (B.C. Provincial Museum of Natural History and Anthropology, 1957):

> "Little remains of the thriving community known to Colnett and Duncan and Gray. The territories of the Kunghit People are more deserted now than they have been for many centuries past. A few fragments of memory, a few bright glimpses in the writings of the past, some old and weathered totem poles in a storage shed, and the mouldering remnants of once-magnificent carved posts and houses on the site of the old village — these are all that survive of the tribe and village of Chiefs Koyah and Ninstints. What was destroyed here was not just a few thousand individual human lives. Human beings must die anyway. It was something even more complex and even more human — a vigorous and functioning society, the product of just as long an evolution as our own, well suited to its environment and vital enough to participate in human cultural achievements not duplicated anywhere else. What was destroyed was one more bright tile in the complicated and wonderful mosaic of man's achievement on earth. Mankind is the loser. We are the losers."

Well, one somewhat flawed, quixotic, sometimes naive, difficult but very likable, intelligent and somehow necessary tile is gone from our little mosaic. We'll miss him. Kilslai!

It's Easy To Sneer

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

"Christ says, don't consider yourself better than someone else because one guy screws a whole bunch of women while the other guy is loyal to his wife." And so it came to pass that, after nine months of demands that the real Jimmy Carter stand up, the real Jimmy Carter stood up (in Playboy Magazine), and immediately the air was thick with shocked housewives and scornful intellectuals calling upon him to sit down again.

In fact, in many ways, the interview is a landmark. It does find Carter telling things about Carter that are fresh and revealing. But the fuss, shock and horror (though predictable) are simply silly. Jimmy Carter fancies the occasional bird, but does not pursue. As opposed to John Fitzgerald Kennedy who fancied and pursued. Or Gerald Ford, who might trip in the pursuit. Jimmy Carter prays a lot. But since he's a strong Christian, that is hardly surprising. Scrape away the ambivalent campaign rhetoric from Carter and he drawls in homely, stumbling prose. But there again, what point is there in New York Liberals welcoming a candidate from the forbidden south and then making a parody meal of his accent?

The Carter that emerges from Playboy is a simpler, more tangible man than any previous portrayal has contrived. He worries. He admits errors. He feels angry enough about racialism to wonder whether he's in the right business. His shoulder is chipped. Under pressure he prays rather than drinks bourbon. A short skirt can throw him. A controversial friend will be supported under fire. "I'm a human being. I'm not a packaged article you can put in a little box and say: 'Here's a Southern Baptist, an ignorant Georgia peanut farmer who doesn't have the right to enjoy music, who has no flexibility of mind, who can't understand the sensitivities of an interpersonal relationship'." But before the easy sneers proliferate, the easy sneerers might ponder what we want of our politicians. The smart and surface sheen? The painful working of a mind, with innermost thoughts attached? Or merely a target, hung as glibly for a platitude as for a halting truth?

It's Hard to Escape Long Arm of Latin Rightists

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

A shudder of horror, mingled with fear and impotent rage, went through the community of Latin American exiles last month as the news of yet another assassination of one of their number came through—this time in Washington, the centre of the imperial heartland where the overthrow of President Allende himself was once discussed and planned.

Orlando Letelier, Allende's collaborator and one of the chief organizers of the embryonic Chilean political resistance to the Pinochet dictatorship, was murdered by a car bomb. He was in the United States to attend a meeting of the leaders of various Chilean left-wing parties trying to plan a common strategy for dealing with the Pinochet dictatorship. Also killed was Mrs. Ronnie Moffit, a staff member of the Transnational Institute of Policy Studies in Amsterdam, of which Letelier was the director. Mrs. Moffit's husband was injured in the explosion.

Two years ago, Allende's commander-in-chief, General Carlos Prats, was blown up in his car with his wife while exiled in Buenos Aires. Last year it was the turn of Bernardo Leighton, the leading progressive Christian Democrat politician, to be the victim of an assassination attempt in Rome. He and his wife were both seriously injured. This year the former Bolivian Presient, General Juan Jose Torres, was murdered in Argentina.

LETELIER

Chilean exiles believe that these assassinations were the work of General Pinochet's personal security police, the DINA, operating in conjunction with other intelligence agencies in Latin American countries and elsewhere. Letelier's assassination would appear to fit into this pattern. When I talked to him in London earlier this year he told me that the DINA was answerable only to Pinochet. An assassination of this importance, taking place in Washington itself, is likely to give fuel to those American Democrats who are campaigning to cut off all American support to the Chilean regime.

Letelier, an urbane Socialist lawyer, was Allende's ambassador in Washington and had the task of explaining to a hostile American administration the intricacies of the nationalization of the U.S. copper mines in Chile. Subsequently he became Interior Minister. Foreign Minister and Defence Minister, and played a key role in the days before the military coup in 1973. He was detained for a year in the concentration camp on Dawson Island after the coup, before being allowed to go into exile.

He would certainly have been aware of the dangers he ran. But what causes alarm in the serried ranks of the Latin American diaspora—exiles spread over several continents—is that the victims of the assassination schemes are for the most part political moderates, and there seems to be no geographical limit to the operations of the death squads.

Latin American history is littered with mad rapacious dictators, cruel caudillos who brought the crude philosophy of the frontier to the European salons of the capital. But the current wave of violence in Latin America, generated by the military dictatorships in Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, and Uruguay, is something entirely new to the continent.

In those countries conservative soldiers have seized power, supported on the civilian side by a tiny group of Right-wing extremists. Their political views are culled from the Nazi and fascist philosophers of the 1930s. Anti-semitism and anti-communism is the dominant feature of their ideology. Indeed Latin America, far from repeating its own history, is beginning to look increasingly like East and Central Europe between the two world wars when fascism was the order of the day.

In Latin America in the early 1970s the mass of the people got a sniff of change. In Chile under Allende, in Argentina under Campora, in Bolivia under Torres there were signs of a new mood, a feeling that the old repressive and oligarchic structures were about to be destroyed.

Now the pendulum has swung back with a vegeance. The people who felt threatened when socialism was in the air are now demanding their pound of flesh.

Nor is the Right-wing drift confined solely to Latin America's southern cone. All over the continent, from Mexico to Peru, from Honduras to Panama, the storm clouds of reaction have risen high above the horizon. While other Third World continents may celebrate the socialist dawn. Latin America — so close to the United States — has nothing to look forward to but increased and more sophisticated repression.

Pro Football and Con

russell baker

Having heard that football was a vital metaphor for understanding industrio-nuclear America, we drove to Washington to discover what could be learned about the country. There a team called the New York Giants, although it was based in New Jersey, was to engage a team called the Washington Redskins, although it employed not a single American Indian. America was obviously a country much given to deception. False advertising, one gathered, must be a way of life.

This was confirmed when we were charged $2 for admission to a "parking lot" and found ourselves instead in a deeply rutted field of dust that left the steering mechanism exhausted and dusted the car inside and out with a fine reddish filth which later necessitated a $2 car wash. In America, we concluded, "parking lots" are devices for stimulating the car-washing industry.

Inside the stadium, we were seated at such great distance from the playing area that it was impossible to discern the athletes' faces without binoculars. This did not distress the specators, who are called "fans," although they fan neither themselves nor the athletes. Despite their remoteness from the performance, these fans displayed intense agitation about individual athletes. Since the athletes are recognizable only by large numbers affixed to their work clothes, we were obviously witnessing a bizarre demonstration of the American passion for thinking of human beings as numbers.

Occasionally, this passion bordered on the grotesque. Football is a sport requiring brief but robust spurts of physical contact. In one such flurry a Washington athlete numbered 17 was knocked to the earth with such force that the binoculars showed him not only stunned, but also bleeding badly from the nose and mouth.

When he was required to leave the contest for surigical ministrations, the fans rose and cheered ecstatically.

One might conclude that Americans are a people who would pay good money to watch ambulances arrive at hospital emergency wards, but a helpful fan nearby explained that this was incorrect.

The fans, she said, were simply so displeased with poor 17's inability to score a goal that they regarded a broken nose or fractured skull as his just retribution for ineptitude. Obviously, Americans demanded the highest standards of competence in their work and would gladly see lengthy hospitalization visited upon any person who fails to satisfy their love of flawless workmanship. One would not want to be a television repairman in this country.

As for the contest, very little can be said about it here, for it is a sport almost utterly unintelligible not only to the casual observer, but also to the fans. It is an extremely complex sport requiring great skills and an inordinate amount of standing about in conferences on the grass. So stringent are the demands of the profession that it takes as long to qualify for the work as it takes the American university system to produce a doctor. Work of this complexity, whether it be medicine, mathematics or boat-building, is so far beyond the average person's comprehension as to be unintelligible and, after short observation, rather dull.

And watching an entire football game requires long observation. The contest we observed lasted over three hours. For perhaps three minutes of this time, it was so brilliantly exciting that even the densest observer could enjoy some of the beauty of the workmanship. Through the other two hours and 57 minutes one struggled with the impulse to yawn.

Between those endless conferences on the grass there were undoubtedly brilliant moments of workmanship, but they were of such delicacy and subtlety that only another football player could have grasped just how splendid they were. If this is America's favorite sport, we concluded, Americans must be a people with infinite capacity for reveling in the pleasures of the incomprehensible. Why, we wonder, has it not occurred to the television networks to fill the American home with six-day conferences of nuclear physicists?

There was, however, one esthetically satisfying moment. It occurred shortly after the fans had cheered so gaily about the damage inflicted on the player numbered 17. A few minutes later he returned to the contest and played an absolutely indespensable role in scoring what proved to be the winning goal. This produced another delirium of cheering, from which we concluded that any American who values the cheers of the crowd has a perverted sense of values.

Afterward, returning to the field of dust, we found the "parking lot" attendants gone, leaving several thousand cars moving in random directions through the miasma in search of exits. We sat there for an hour becoming muffled in thick coats of dust before finding a highway that led to a body-wash establishment.

Bargain Mortgages to End Soon

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

"It's sort of a last-chance bargain sale," says Audrey Grimshaw, president of the Victoria Society of Real Estate Salesmen.

She said potential home-buyers have until Nov. 30 to take advantage of a department of housing offer of a grant or low-interest second mortgage on any type of house.

After Nov. 30, new regulations come into effect which will limit the number of properties that qualify under a more restrictive grant program.

Although there is a $1.49 day atmosphere in the present market, there is a very serious side to the change, she said.

"After Nov. 30 it will be even more difficult for young couples to buy their first home."

"I don't see how any young couple will be able to afford a home of their own under the new regulations. I feel sorry for them and wish something could be done."

The present regulations have been helpful to many young couples in this area, she said.

The present rules, still in effect, allow someone buying a new home a choice of a $1,000 grant or a $5,000 second mortgage at the bargain interest rate of 8.75 per cent.

Those buying a resale home have a choice of a $500 grant or a second mortgage of $2,500 at 8.75 per cent.

In every case, the buyer must have never owned property before in order to qualify. But in every case, all homes on the market were eligible under the grant program.

Under the New Home Purchase Assistance Act, which comes into effect Nov. 30, the majority of properties will no longer qualify for grants of any kind. Eligible properties are those at the AHOP limit or less, which means $45,000 in Victoria and $38,000 in outlying areas.

The only new housing that qualifies for any kind of grant is condominiums. The majority of listed resale homes are also above the $45,000 maximum.

For the few properties that qualify, the new regulation are these:

—Those buying a new home for the first time will have a choice of a $1,000 grant or a $5,000 second mortgage at the National Housing Act rate (currently 11.25 to 11.5 per cent).

—Those buying a resale home ($45,000 or less) also will have a chance for a $5,000 second mortgage at NHA rates but will not have a choice of a grant.

—A spokesman for the department of housing said any interim agreement signed by Nov. 30 would qualify under the more generous present rules. He said officially the applications are to be in by Nov. 30, but the department will accept under the present act those applications based on interim agreements signed by the end of November.

Fragile Yukon Economy Crippled by Disputes

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — The Yukon's fragile, mining-based economy is in a mess.

The $228-million mining industry was crippled last summer when the United Steel workers (USW) closed three of the Yukon's four operating mines as well as an asbestos mine just across the border in northern British Columbia.

Labor disputes disrupted operations at Whitehorse Copper, United Keno Hill Mines at Elsa and Cyprus Anvil Mining at Faro. Cassiar Asbestos was closed in northern B.C.

The only mine unaffected by labor problems was Clinton Creek, eight miles from the Alaska border. The workers at Clinton Creek are members of the Canadian Mine Workers Union. Their negotiations are concerned with severance pay.

Cassiar Asbestos Corp. has announced that the Clinton Creek mine will be permanently closed in early 1977 because commercial-grade fibres have been exhausted. Exploration in the area is expected to continue.

The Cyprus Anvil lead-zinc mine, a $20-million net-profit operation at Faro, is the Yukon's largest mine and Canada's top lead producer. When in operation, it mills 10,000 tons of ore a day.

There have been four legal and illegal work stoppages at Cyprus Anvil so far this year. The latest strike by 400 USW members was a protest against the federal anti-inflation board, which rolled back a wage increase to nine from 36 per cent.

Mining activities at Faro have an international impact. Skagway, Alaska, is the port where ships load Cyprus Anvil ore concentrates destinated for markets in Japan and Europe. The lead and zinc concentrates are smelted overseas for use in the manufacturing of goods that circulate throughout the western world.

Faro isn't on most maps. Constructed as an instant town in 1969, it is the Yukon's second-largest community with 1,500 residents.

Cyprus Anvil is the Northern Canada Power Commission's biggest customer. With the mine closed, the commission is losing $200,000 a month.

The power commission is a federally-owned utility which can't operate in the red, and that means Yukon taxpayers will probably have to pick up an deficit.

The commission has already raised wholesale power rates by 80 per cent in the last year to defray a $30 million cost override for its 30-megawatt Aishihik power project 80 miles northwest of Whitehorse.

Because of recent power and petroleum price increases, the 22,000 residents of the Yukon face a long, harsh winter. Many are jobless and some are moving out. Unoccupied houses with For Sale signs are increasingly evident.

Deficit $1B Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — The government incurred a budgetary deficit of $2.849 billion in the first five months of the 1976-77 fiscal year, more than $1 billion higher than that of the same period a year earlier, the finance department reported Wednesday.

Last year the government's record deficit was $5 billion.

Spending in the fiscal year beginning last April 1 has so far totalled $15.461 billion. Revenues were $12.612 billion.

During the first five months of the 1975-76 fiscal year, spending was $13.069 billion, revenues totalled $11.223 billion and there was a deficit of $1.846 billion.

In August, 1976, spending was $3.03 billion, revenues were $2.539 billion and there was a deficit of $491 million.

The deficit in August, 1975, was $387 million, accounted for by spending of $2.524 billion and revenues of $2.137 billion.

Geneva Likely Site For Rhodesia Talks

Ties News Services

LONDON — Any conference to discuss the establishment of an interim multiracial Rhodesian government probably will be held in Geneva, according to British diplomatic observers.

British Foreign Office would say only that a decision on the site and timing of the conference will be taken by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland today. They emphasized that an announcement may not be made immediately.

The proposal is for an interim government to guide Rhodesia, a former British colony, to black majority rule within two years.

British officials said they expect Ian Smith, premier of the white-minority Rhodesian government, to attend the conference along wth black Rhodesian nationalists leaders.

Smith last month accepted Anglo-American proposals calling for transition to black majority rule within two years. He also accepted the concept of an interim government, with a council of ministers with a majority of blacks and then a black prime minister.

A choice of Geneva would be a departure from earlier British thinking because Crosland wanted the conference to take place outside Rhodesia but somewhere in southern Africa.

Diplomatic observers said Geneva has the advantage of being a neutral city with excellent communications and accommodation facilities.

Meanwhile in Salisbury, the leader of Rhodesia's white opposition party says members of Prime Minister Ian Smith's party are attempting to find a loophole that will prevent the transfer of power to majority blacks.

Rhodesia Party President Tim Gibbs said in a speech Thursday that some members of the Rhodesian Front Party were attempting to renege on Smith's acceptance of plans for majority rule.

Gibbs said party members "have been holding meetings throughout the length and breadth of the country, telling the party faithful that in spite of what the prime minister has said, there is a very definite loophole which (they) intend exercising in the months ahead."

VORSTER WARNED FACE-TO-FACE

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — A black leader warned Prime Minister John Vorster today in a rare face-to-face confrontation that Africans will conclude that violence is their only alternative if they are not given political rights.

Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, political leader of the largest tribe, the Zulus, met Vorster at the prime minister's office in Pretoria with seven other tribal homeland leaders.

The blacks requested the meeting to discuss the recent wave of racial unrest. At least 376 persons have been killed in anti-government violence that began in June.

Vorster last met the black leaders in January, 1975.

Buthelezi told Vorster: "If we cannot find common ground ... our people will feel that violence is the only alternative left to the black people of South Africa."

He proposed "political practices and institutions as determined by the western free world be accepted" in South Africa.

Buthelezi is the recognized leader of some 5,000,000 Zulus and is by far the most outspoken critic of the white government's race policies of any black nationalist not in exile or detention.

Chinese Factions Feud in Hong Kong

Manchester Guardian

HONG KONG — The death of Mao Tse-tung has led to a series of clashes between the Chinese Nationalists and the Communists here, with a worried British administration and special police intervening to avoid further hostilities.

The underground "war" between the Communists and the pro-Taiwanese, both funded and partly controlled from outside this British colony, is a fundamental fact of Hong Kong politics, although it is rarely emphasized by the authorities. Each party is organized in trade unions, associations and other front organizations. They maintain schools, colleges, businesses, travel agencies and, of course, espionage networks.

Since 1949, the Hong Kong government's primary task has been to prevent these two powerful political forces from going for each other's throats, by quiet mediation and police work. The result has been an uneasy coexistence, but a continuing struggle for power.

There is evidence that after Mao's death Taiwan instructed the nationalists in Hong Kong to make a determined effort to disrupt the mourning ceremonies for the chairman and seize the "opportunity" of increasing their influence.

The leadership is believed to have told Taipei that conditions in the colony were not "suitable" for such an offensive. Nevertheless, several open clashes have occurred.

Killer Chooses Firing Squad

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Admitted killer Gary Gilmore, 35, was sentenced Thursday to die before a firing squad for shooting a motel clerk to death during a robbery.

District Judge J. Robert Bullock asked which method of execution Gilmore preferred — hanging or shooting. Gilmore said, "I prefer to be shot."

U.K. Weather Now Normal, Back to Wet

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's worst drought in history officially was declared over today after a month of torrential rain, which in some areas were three times higher than the September average.

But a spokesman for the department of the environment warned Britons that there was still a water shortage and they must continue to economize in their use of water.

"We shall be facing another water shortage next summer unless it rains heavily until then," the spokesman added.

U.K. Credit Cost Squeezed Up

LONDON (CP) — Interest rates on commercial bank loans and house mortgages jumped today, following the British government's new credit squeeze.

The association of savings and loans institutions recommended that its members raise house mortgage rates to a record 12.25 per cent from the current 10.50 per cent.

Barclays Bank raised its base rate for loans by two per cent to 14 per cent, signalling a similar increase by other banks. Some borrowers may have to pay as much as 18 per cent on overdrafts — the highest ever.

The rise in domestic interest rates was made inevitable by the Bank of England's decision Thursday to lift its minimum lending rate to 15 from 13 per cent. The move was the toughest yet in the British battle to contain inflation and restore foreign confidence in the British pound.

But the pound showed no appreciable improvement on foreign exchanges, trading at about $1.6650 U.S. at which it closed Thursday.

The London stock market continued its downward plunge. At noon The Financial Times index of leading shares was down 8.2 at 287.8. It had reached a high of 417 last February.

A union leader said the squeeze may mean disaster for the Labor government at the polls.

"It will knock hell out of the Labor party politically at the next election," said Joe Gormley, moderate leader of the National Union of Mineworkers. "Who can afford to borrow money at 15 per cent to invest in industry."

Miners' Raise Cut Another 6%

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal anti-inflation administrator Donald Tansley has chopped another six per cent from pay raises negotiated by 450 miners at the Cyprus Anvil mine at Faro, Yukon, a finance department spokesman said today.

The employees, represented by the United Steelworkers of America, and the company had originally agreed to first-year pay raises of 36.5 per cent which the anti-inflation board said should be cut to 14 per cent.

After a union appeal of the board decision, Mr. Tansley cut the first-year pay raises to eight per cent.

Because of the first board ruling, the employees have been striking for about eight weeks with the impact of the work stoppage being felt throughout Northern Canada.

Recently, the Canada Labor Relations Board (CLRB) ruled in a precedent-setting decision that the employees were entitled to strike because the anti-inflation board had nullified the negotiated settlement through the recommended pay rollback.

The labor board decision is being appealed in the Federal Court of Appeal by Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp.

Tansley said in his decision that pay increases in the second year of the two-year negotiated agreement should be held to 10 per cent. The negotiated raise in the second year was 10.43 per cent.

MORE BUILDERS ON AIB LIST

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board is to add between 60 and 100 residential construction firms with less than 500 employees to the list of companies required to submit price and profit reports.

The board said in a news release Thursday that the move is expected to allow more detailed and representative picture of developments in the home-building industry and to ensure effective restraint on prices in that field."

Although all construction firms with 20 or more employees are covered by the program, relatively few are required to report on profits and prices.

Residential construction companies with more than 500 employees now have to report under the program, but there are only a handful of these firms in the country, a board spokesman said.

The list of companies which will have to report now is being drawn up. While these have less than 500 workers, they are significant in the regions in which they operate, the release said.

The decision to increase the number of residential construction firms required to report was taken because the board felt the small number of firms with over 500 workers was too limited to enable adequate monitoring of housing prices and profits.

The list of firms covered will be published by the board later.

The board also announced it has decided not to extend reporting requirements to non-residential construction firms with less than 500 employees.

These companies obtain most of their business through secret, competitive bidding which is exempt from the guides.

While the board said it expects small non-residential construction firms to ensure that price increases only reflect cost increases, it said an extension of reporting would require a lot of effort by several thousand small companies to collect information based on a small proportion of business.

The release said the board would identify firms which try to take advantage of their exemption "in a manner which is inconsistent with the spirit of the anti-inflation program."

Peace Prize For Two Irish Women

OSLO (AP) — Sixteen major Norwegian newspapers have joined an effort to raise $145,000 for a "People's Peace Prize" to be given to the two leaders of the Women's Peace Movement in Northern Ireland.

The campaign was launched Sept. 25 by Faedrelandsvennen, a leading provincial newspaper in Kristiansand, near Norway's southernmost point. Almost every major paper from Kristiansand to Tromsoe in the far north have joined the campaign.

EMI Suit Runs Overtime

A major civil negligence trial involving Royal Jubilee Hospital was adjourned in B.C. Supreme Court here Thursday and will resume in Vancouver Tuesday.

The trial, originally set for seven court days, has lasted nine days and it is estimated at least two more days will be needed.

Mr. Justice Hirice Smith is expected to reserve judgment when the trial concludes.

The trial is being continued in Vancouver because Mr. Justice Smith has to return to the mainland and because the over-run on the case this week in Victoria has postponed other scheduled Supreme Court cases in Victoria into next week.

Theresa Anne Worth is suing Royal Jubilee Hospital for damages, alleging negligence, as well as psychiatrist Dr. Alexander Stewart, general practitioner Dr. Diane Grant and nurse Peggy Gallimore.

Miss Worth was paralysed from the waist down after jumping from the second floor roof garden of Eric Martin Institute, the psychiatric wing of Royal Jubilee, Nov. 2, 1973. She was 23 at the time.

EMI administrator Clifford Brown, who was to have continued his testimony Thursday, was stood down as a witness and will continue his evidence in Vancouver, along with Gallimore who has yet to be called.

Phyllis Keeler, head nurse on Miss Worth's ward at the time of the incident, told Mr. Justice Smith Thursday she did not feel the woman was an elopement risk but did consider her a suicidal risk.

Cecil Branson, Miss Worth's counsel, suggested Mrs. Keeler felt at the time the risk of suicide or attempted suicide was "extremely high."

Mrs. Keeler repeated that she felt Miss Worth was a "risk."

Branson presented a question and answer from Mrs. Keeler's examination for discovery, a pre-trial proceeding where one party to an action may be informed as to facts known by other parties.

At that time, she was asked if the risk on Nov. 2, 1973, of Miss Worth considering suicide and attempting it was "extremely high."

"Yes, I would say yes," was Mrs. Keeler's reply.

In court Thursday, she agreed that answer was true.

Mrs. Keeler also told the court Miss Worth returned from a day pass Oct. 29 and Dr. Stewart cancelled further passes. Miss Worth was told then she was a committed patient and she was "very upset" and wanted to leave.

She said she ordered Miss Worth placed on "suicide precautions" Nov. 1 after nurse Gallimore reported a choking incident involving a neck chain and a coat hanger.

She spoke to Stewart by phone and he said it would be "deleterious" to Miss Worth's progress to have her locked up in the psychiatric intensive care ward.

The next morning, she said she sought and obtained a "specific verbal order" for suicide precautions from Stewart after discussing with him her "unpredictable" behavior overnight.

The overnight nurse, Marjory MacDuff, said Miss Worth was "definitely considered unpredictable and suicidal" in the early hours of Nov. 2.

But, she said, Miss Worth gave her no cause to believe she would escape from the building.

Mrs. MacDuff added that Miss Worth wouldn't have been an elopement risk on her shift because exit doors and elevators were locked.

The court was told earlier that Miss Worth left her third floor room shortly after midday Nov. 2, went to the second floor by elevator, walked on to the roof garden, climbed the fence and jumped.

CHUM CONTRACT CLOSE—CHIEF

DUNCAN — Indian officials are hopeful that a contract between the federal department of fisheries and the Cowichan hatchery company for the hatching of 320,000 chum salmon, will be signed in the near future.

"An agreement has almost been reached," said Cowichan Band Chief Wes Modeste. "The hatchery program is a step in the right direction."

Under the proposed agreement, the expertise and manpower from the hatchery would be involved in monitoring the incubation boxes and hatching of the chum salmon eggs. The fry would be released into small watercourses feeding into the Cowichan River.

The hatchery company at present is only involved in fish farming which is still in an experimental stage in B.C.

"I think something like this should have been started years ago," Modeste said. "It is a great idea and I hope there can be more co-operation in future on similar projects."

Kenny's Hobby: Is It Really All Wet?

PROSSER, Wash. — Kenny Lewis can talk to sprinklers — in their own language.

He even practices with a "tick, tick, tick," which his mother, Mrs. Kenneth Lewis, says she's got used to hearing.

The hiss of sprinklers is as common as cricket chirps to most farm children in dry eastern Washington, where irrigated farming has turned the desert into lush croplands.

But Kenny, 11, is a sprinkler expert, imitating each variety, from small lawn models to giant cannon sprinklers used on centre pivot systems.

"If you listen closely, each sprinkler has its own cadence," he said.

"He's been fascinated about sprinklers since he was two," said his mother.

Kenny can even adjust his imitations to allow for a loss of water pressure or a mechanical malfunction.

"I've wondered at times whether it's normal for a boy to go around making sounds like a sprinkler, but I guess it's a hobby like anything else," said his mother.

Kenny used to be interested in windshield wipers, but that phase passed, she said.

"I was a little crazy over thermometers once, but they didn't have any moving parts and I lost interest in them," Kenny added.

Kenny recently passed up a trip to Disneyland to visit his water-squirting friends at the headquarters of the Rainbird Sprinkler Co., near Los Angeles.

His knowledge of the machines impressed Rainbird President Mary Elizabeth LaFetra enough for her to make him a present of a chrome-plated sprinkler.

But Kenny said he likes all brands.

Commuting Days End for Carole

VANCOUVER — Carole Taylor, formerly an interviewer with the CTV network public affairs show W5, will be working in Vancouver as hostess of Celebrity Revue, a show on local television station CKVU.

She began work Thursday on the new show. She had been travelling weekly between Toronto and Vancouver in order to date Vancouver mayor Art Phillips.

HUMPHREY CHEERFUL AFTER OPERATION

NEW YORK — Sen. Hubert Humphrey was reported "very cheerful" today following removal of his cancerous bladder in a six-hour operation his dortors say "went off without a hitch."

Dr. Willet Whitmore, said the operation involved the removal of Humphrey's entire bladder, his prostate gland, nearby lymph nodes and the part of the urethra directly connected to the bladder.

In addition, Whitmore said, a portion of the senator's intestine was removed and used as a tube to eliminate urine from his body.

Lawyer Fears Patty Flight

SAN FRANCISCO — The federal prosecutor in the Patricia Hearst case thinks that the newspaper heiress might flee were she released from prison. James Browning has filed papers with Judge William Orrick opposing the release of Miss Hearst on bail pending appeal of her bank robbery conviction.

NEW YORK —, Homicide charges have been dropped against a 24-year-old unwed mother whose infant daughter was killed and partially eaten last month by the mother's pet dog. Criminally negligent homicide charges were dismissed Thursday against Joanne Bashold, whose five-day old daughter was attacked while she was on an errand.

TORONTO — Ian Tyson, Canadian country music singer, is leaving this weekend for Nashville, to seek opportunity in the United States country music field. He said a record company has offered him a chance to record some of his songs with Nashville musicians. "I want to see if I can cut it in that league," he said, "That's where the grown-ups play."

NEW YORK — Tiny Tim is seeking $15 million in damages from Oui magazine for running nude pictures of his estranged wife, "Miss Vicki," and himself in an "erotic, suggestive and lewd" manner. The ukelele strummer, whose real name is Herbert Khaury, and "Miss Vicki" parted several years ago and she is now a go-go dancer in Camden, N.J. The suit says the picture spread was "humiliating, embarrassing, degrading and unnatural."

NEW YORK — Broadway columnist Leonard Lyons, who for 40 yerars wrote the spritely Lyons Den column for the New York Post and other papers, died Thursday after a long illness in his Central Park West home. He was 70. Lyons retired in May, 1974.

JOHANNESBURG — A folk singer sang two songs while standing on a fifth floor window ledge of the South African stock exchange building here, then leaped to his death. Two stock exchange officials pleaded with 32-year-old Stan Domp, who had walked into an office Thursday and demanded a gun to kill himself. "He seemed convinced that Communists were after him and asked us, the stock exchange, which he saw as a symbol of capitalism, to help him," said Robert Newton. While Newton went to call a colleague, Domp climbed out the window. "I grabbed at his sweater but I could not hold it properly and he fell," said Newton.

SAN FRANCISCO — A crowded bus, on its way to the Opera House for a performance of Wagner's Die Walkuere, stalled in traffic. "Please let me off," pleaded a well-modulated voice. "All these people are on their way to hear me sing and I'd better get their first." The voice belonged to Wagnerian tenor Jon Vickers, who was last seen sprinting up Van Ness Avenue to beat the audience to the theatre. He made it.

[illegible] Greek Communist Markos Vafiadis has been prohibited from returning to Greece from the Soviet Union, where he has been living in exile the past 27 years. Vafiadis, now 70, applied to return last July. He led the 1946-49 Communist uprising in Greece but fled to Romania and then to the U.S.S.R. when the Greek army was victorious.

The love story that will scare the life out of you.

New Burnaby Fire Chief Is the Man Who Doesn't Exist . . .

Times News Services

BURNABY — For this community's 200 firemen, Thomas Nairn is the man who doesn't exist.

Nairn, fire chief for the past three months, spends his days in virtual isolation, spurned and ostracized by the men he is supposed to lead.

"He's an outcast," one member of the department said Wednesday.

"He's like a wisp. I see him occasionally scurrying up the stairs. He disappears into his office and never comes out. No one knows what he does in there."

The firemen, who have waged a persistent battle against Nairn's appointment, have vowed to snub the chief at every opportunity and frustrate him at every turn. They're trying to run him out.

"A program has been formulated to ensure his isolation is maintained," said the department employee. "I can't say any more except that no strike action is contemplated. There are ways and means of taking job action."

A fire chief is expected to attend major fires but if Nairn showed up at a fire his orders would be ignored, he said.

"Sure, a fireman who disobeys an order from the chief could be considered insubordinate ad disciplinary action could be taken.

"But the union position is that a suspension of one man is an action against all the others.

Hearing Called on 332-Unit Housing Project

A public hearing will be held soon on the 332-unit Interurban-Marigold housing project, a development which Saanich first started planning in the late 1960s.

Council voted Thursday to hold the hearing after final details were hammered out at an all-day meeting Wednesday of municipal officials and representatives of Dunhill Development Corporation, the provincial government's housing arm.

The project is proposed for a 36-acre parcel of Crown land, part of 136 acres bounded by Carey, Interurban and Roy Roads.

The provincial government will give Saanich $504,000 to help upgrade parts of the three boundary roads.

Dunhill will be responsible for all on-site services while Saanich will assume costs for overseeing municipal services.

Engineering services for property abutting the three streets will be the responsibility of Dunhill, Saanich will pay for oversize sewer and water lines.

The municipality will also be responsible for street improvements on the tract of land where the Dunhill property is located.

Council decided Thursday to control the development by use of a restrictive covenant rather than by a land-use contract.

Eighty single-family homes will be built on the periphery of the property. A total of 252 multiple-dwellings will be built on another five acres. About 36 acres will be set aside for parkland.

Dunhill spokesman David O'Brien said it is possible for legal surveys to be registered by January so that construction can start in the late spring.

O'Brien said private developers are expected to build the mutiple units.

He said Housing Minister Hugh Curtis wants the lots to be sold rather than have them available on a land-lease basis.

O'Brien said it is possible the Assisted Home Ownership Plan could be used to help people buy the housing units.

Saanich's Advisory Planning Commissioon will study the proposal, which if agreed to in general terms, could be aired at a public hearing later this month.

Mayor Ed Lum said the Panama Flats will remain intact, and said none of the land to be used is in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

"It was council's intention (in the late 1960s) to develop low-cost housing in the Roy Road area," he reported," "But in the interim, senior governments have gotten into the act."

POLICE DISTRIBUTE CASH

Eleven charities and other groups in Greater Victoria have shared $16,838 raised by the Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association in its sponsorship of the International Circus in April.

Police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said the largest amounts, $4,000 each, went to the Royal Jubilee Hospital for a cardiac monitoring unit and to Victoria General Hospital for a gamma spectrometer.

The Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded received $3,500, while the G. R. Pearkes Clinic, Queen Alexandra Solarium and Kiwanis Wheels project got $1,000 each.

Braiden said $538 was given to the Victor Street School for the Retarded to help purchase a new bus, $500 went each to the Arbutus Crafts for the Handicapped, the Victoria police cofmunity band and Victoria police Boys Club, while $300 was donated to the police-sponsored C.O.S.Y. group which stages dances for young people.

The $16,838 represents the policeman's share — 20 per cent — of the gross take on telephone solicited ticket sales for the event. The other 80 per cent went to the circus operators.

The total was the largest amount earned since the policemen started bringing the circus to Victoria 10 years ago. Up until 1973 most of the money the policemen received went to their mutual benefit association; after 1973, half of the amount was donated to charity. This year all of the proceeds went to charity.

The association decided not to continue its sponsorship of the circus after winning a quarter million dollars in the Western Canada lottery in February.

Public's Views Sought on Fish

Citizen groups and individuals interested in preserving B.C. salmon and trout fisheries have been urged to attend the federal fisheries and marine service-sponsored "community inquiry" in Victoria on Nov. 1.

"This is a chance for citizens to have an input into the proposed $300 million federal salmonid rehabilitation program," said Howard English, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation. "The aim of the program is to double the fish production by the beginning of the next century."

Location of the meeting will be announced later but it will be held between 5:30 and 10 p.m. Sixteen similar inquiries will be held across the province.

English said public participation in the program is important to ensure a "balanced rehabilitation program."

"We want to see the program include stream enhancement and protection — not all devoted to the construction of hatcheries."

Dr. G. H. Green of Vancouver, director-general, Fisheries and Marine Service, Pacific Region, said public involvement in the program is most important.

Shooting Victim Feared, Rodriguez Trial Is Told

NANAIMO (CP) — A man who was shot to death was a person people feared, a witness testified Thursday at the trial of James Rodriguez Melendez, charged with the murder of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones near Duncan Oct. 24, 1975.

The witness, I. W. Brust, testified he had been threatened once by Oldfield and was therefore afraid to go to the remote Oldfield home, especially at night.

He said Oldfield not only owned several weapons, including an automatic pistol, but was classified as an expert in both judo and karate.

Brust said he did go to the house with Rodriguez on Oct. 25 to pick up some of Rodriguez's belongings. Rodriguez earlier had been ejected from the house he had shared with Oldfield.

He testified he had been asked to gather the belongings while Rodriguez was on holiday, but didn't because he feared Oldfield and was was asked again to get the belongings when Rodriguez returned.

Andre Regan of Victoria had also refused to assist Rodriguez in getting his possessions, Brust said.

Asked about the eventual trip to the house, Brust said it was "safer to go out there in the daylight when Oldfield was present than to slide out there at night."

He said when the two arrived, he found several .22-calibre bullets on the back porch, which Rodriguez gathered. He asked several questions about possible bullet damage to the house and the possibility of blood.

He was told by Rodriguez there was no damage and that some blood had been wiped up the previous night.

When asked why he took care not to leave fingerprints in the house, Brust said, "I had a few ideas of my own and didn't want to take any chances."

He said he asked Rodriguez to leave when "I was getting a bit paranoid — a bit scared."

After gathering Rodriguez's belongings, the two men went to Duncan and Rodriguez cashed two cheques and had several credit cards belonging to Oldfield, Brust said.

The trial continues.

CULHANE MEANT WELL—WALLACE

Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace says his call for Clare Culhane to resign from the citizens advisory committee at the British Columbia Penitentiary has nothing to do with any attempt on her part to pass letters from prisoners at the penitentiary.

The citizens committee played a role in negotiations that led to the end of last week's 81-hour siege at the penitentiary in New Westminster.

Dr. Wallace said Thursday that when he walked out of the prison Oct. 1, he had seen enough to convince him that Mrs. Culhane, "with the best of intentions, is very concerned about the inmates in our jail system."

However, Dr. Wallace said, "she shows that great concern in a manner which damages the credibility of our committee which is supposed to be interested in all the parties who are concerned in the jail system. That means the guards as well as the inmates."

He didn't disclose what actions by Mrs. Culhane prompted his demand for her resignation. He said he has been waiting to put his case before the whole citizens advisory committee.

Radio Announcer, Mayor Pay Libel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Surrey men were awarded $7,500 each Thursday in British Columbia Supreme Court in a libel action against radio commentator Edward Murphy and Mayor Edward McKitka of Surrey.

Mr. Justice Gordon Rae awarded damages to Herbert Lowell Fritz, a professional engineer who has resided in Surrey since 1958, and his son, Daniel Lowell Fritz, a successful real estate developer.

Mr. Justice Rae said the damage award for libel for the father and son included $2,500 each for exemplary damages. He awarded nominal damages of $100 each to two companies, Realescope Realty Ltd. and Pacific Rim Equities Corporation.

The libel action was discontinued against Jim Pattison Broadcasting Ltd., operators of the station which broadcasts Murphy's talk show (CJOR) because the station made an apology and retraction on the regular time of Murphy's program.

However, the judge said Murphy refused to read the apology and retraction when offered to do so by the station manager after the attention of all defendants had been drawn to the untruths which had been broadcast on the show which discussed real estate developments in Surrey.

Mr. Justice Rae also said that neither Murphy nor McKitka chose voluntarily to give evidence on his own behalf.

The broadcast occurred July 17, 1974, and Mr. Justice Rae said that such statements were calculated to disparage the plaintiffs and that they had been brought into "public scandal and contempt and ridicule."

$1.5 Million For Ginter Brewery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harold Sigurdson, trustee in charge of the assets of Ben Ginter, said Thursday the Prince George brewery owned by Ginter has been sold to Western Brewery Ltd.

The sale is subject to approval of the British Columbia Supreme Court.

Sigurdson said the purchase price was $1,542,700, not including material assets of $71,000 and a sizeable amount of beer at the brewery. He said this beer, about 160,000 dozen bottles, will be sold through normal channels.

The purchase price will be used to pay off debts of Ginter and his companies, which have risen to almost $6 million, Sigurdson said.

Other assets owned by Ginter include breweries in Alberta and Manitoba, a winery in Kelowna, an unfinished plant in Richmond and road-building equipment.

David Thomas of West Vancouver, one of the principal owners of Western Brewery Ltd., said his company plans to produce beer for sale in the Prince George area.

Surgical Misadventure

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Thursday night that the death of Colleen Gowland, 21, of Abbotsford was due to surgical misadventure.

Miss Gowland was trapped in an elevator during a fire July 16 on the fifth floor of the Sheraton-Landmark hotel in Vancouver. She received burns to 80 per cent of her body.

A month after being released from hospital, Miss Gowland was re-admitted for treatment of a throat ailment due to the fire. She died Sept. 22 of cardiac arrest as she was being prepared for an operation.

One of the main questions during the two-day inquest was how the elevator went to the fifth floor during the fire.

Fire department officials said the heat from the blaze set off heat-sensitive buttons in the elevator, but elevator company officials said this was not possible and all systems were functioning normally.

The jury made 11 recommendations, including monitoring of electrocardiograms by auditory and visual means at all times before and during operations, increased investigation of fire safety of elevators, training of hotel staffs in responsibilities in fires.

Dam Off If Growth Below 7%—Hydro

REVELSTOKE (CP) — British Columbia Hydro says it will not build a controversial dam on the Columbia River if the projected annual growth rate in electrical power use in the province drops below seven per cent.

J. A. Polson, manager of Hydro's economic analysis department, said in an interview that the Crown corporation's projected energy growth figure had been revised downward by about one-half of one per cent.

Hydro had previously estimated the energy growth rate to the year 1990 at 8.6 per cent a year. The B.C. Energy Commission has estimated Hydro's growth rate to 1991 at 5.1 to 5.4 per cent a year.

"If the projected annual growth rate were to fall below seven per cent, there is no doubt that the Revelstoke project would go down," said Polson.

Polson came here to dispute testimony given at public hearings conducted by water comptroller Howard De Beck into Hydro's application to build a dam on one of the last untamed sections of the Columbia River.

He denied Hydro is subsidizing industrial users of energy as Ernst Berndt, a University of B.C. economist, testified.

Dr. Berndt said Hydro was subsidizing the industrial users to undercut the possibility of them building their own plants.

"B.C. Hydro rates generally reflect cost to the extent that it is feasible," Polson said.

In a final summation to the public hearing, lawyer H. D. C. Hunter, who represents the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said Hydro had failed to prove the need for completion of the dam and generating plant north of here by 1982.

Hunter told De. Beck that Hydro is trying to blackmail him into "granting the licence at a very early date on the grounds of having to award the first contract early next year."

He said Hydro's estimated growth figures ignore factors which will limit load growth such as conservation practices, rate increases or even proper consideration of future development.

Provincial wildlife biologist Guy Woods, who was subpoenaed to the hearing, said the construction access road to the seven-mile dam in the Pend-D'Oreille River valley had led to destruction of winter game habitat.

He testified that the hearing prior to the granting of a water rights licence to build the seven-mile dam had been warned that environmental damage would result from poorly-planned road construction.

One of the panel members called by the B.C. Wildlife Federation was Benn Dean, a professional guide in the Upper Columbia since 1948.

He said that his livelihood had been seriously affected by the construction of the Mica Dam and that the completion of the Revelstoke Dam would further curtail his licensed guiding area.

PAROLEE HELD

SURREY (CP) — Police were holding a 27-year-old prison parolee in custody Thursday following an attempt to kidnap a 16-year-old youth at knifepoint.

Surrey RCMP said the suspect was arrested after the youth escaped from his abductor by jumping from the suspect's car after he was seized at midnight Wednesday night.

A device designed to resemble a bomb, a loaded .22-calibre rifle, ammunition and a knife with a 12-inch blade were found in the car, police said.

RCMP said a printed note was also found, but declined to disclose details.

Air Search For Plane Continues

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A search for two Calgary men missing aboard a single-engined aircraft is continuing in improved weather.

Pilot Evan Wallace, 22, and Ed York, 32, left Calgary Sept. 23 on a one-day business trip to Kelowna, but radio contact with the pair was lost about noon that day near Banff.

Lack of a flight plan and poor weather had hampered searchers.

Capt. Craig Mills of the Canadian Forces said Thursday the search is being conducted with six helicopters out of the Banff-Golden area, three planes out of Kamloops and one out of Calgary.

Hostess 'Warned'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eleanor Harrigan, a former hostess at the Penthouse cabaret, testified Thursday she had been warned by city police she could be used as a scapegoat in morals charges against the nightclub.

She was testifying in the trial of Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., Joe Phillipone, Ross, Domenick and Rose Filiponi, Minerva Kelly and Jan Sedlak, all charged with conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and conspiring to corrupt public morals.

Mrs. Harrigan, a defence witness, said she had been visited by two policemen and recalled telling them she did not always get along with the Filliponis.

She said the policemen then told her she should get a lawyer because she could be used as a scapegoat.

Man Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — Romeo Joseph Lavoie, 32, of Vancouver was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday after he was convicted in British Columbia Supreme Court of the murder of Diane Louise Delane.

The young woman was found in her Vancouver apartment last January with an electrical cord wrapped around her neck. Lavoie lived in the basement of the same building.

No Bugs Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer Dave Brown says his investigation has not turned up any evidence that the barristers' room at the provincial courthouse on Main Street was bugged by RCMP.

Brown, counsel for 19 persons accused in a drug conspiracy case, complained Sept. 23 of the possible bugging. He made reference to an incident at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

"Our preliminary invesigation proved negative," Brown said Thursday.

Hearing Set

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Oct. 30 was set as the date of a preliminary hearing on 15 charges against Richard Len Wright, 33, of California, including attempted murder of a police officer. The charges were laid following an incident in which a pistol was discharged in a hotel parking lot Sept. 28.

Jail Checks Urged

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A coroner's jury has recommended that frequent irregular checks be made of prisoners' cells and that prisoners be monitored by television. The jury also found that the death of Larry Wade, 50, of Kamloops, found hanging Sept. 16 in a city jail cell, was unnatural and attached no blame.

PC BAGMAN BOUNCED

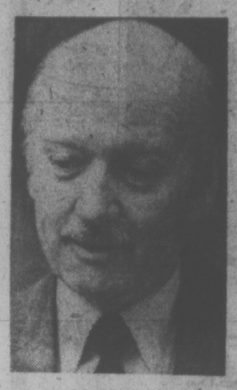
MONTREAL (CP) — The chief fund-raiser for the Quebec wing of the Progressive Conservative party was dismissed Thursday night following allegations he had been involved in a conflict of interest.

The party's executive committee met for four hours to study the allegations before deciding to fire Jean-Yves Lortie, although it later issued a statement saying it "did not find the conflict of interest existed."

"Considering the global interest of the party and situations that appear politically abnormal, the decision was taken," the statement said.

A report published Thursday had alleged Lortie was involved in conflict of interest in a real estate deal last year when he was the party's secretary-general.

Jamieson Speech A Shame: McKinnon



McKinnon

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson had hardly settled into his new job as foreign minister when he came under attack for spoiling Canada's well-earned reputation as a willing contributor to world peace.

It was Jamieson's maiden speech before the United Nations general assembly that aroused the ire of Progressive Conservative defence and external affairs critics. He had brought "shame" to Canada, the official opposition said Thursday.

The speech caused some consternation and indignation within the defence department.

After berating all but a dozen or so UN members for failing to contribute to the operating costs of the UN peacekeeping force inn Cyprus for the first six months of the year, he threatened to pack up our troops — all 515 of them — and bring them home," said Allan McKinnon, Tory party defence critic.

"Jamieson is quite right that all member states should make a contribution to UN peacekeeping activities, but it is poor-mouthing in the extreme for him to pretend that because all other states don't contribute, Canada itself is unable to bear the extra costs associated with stationing these troops in Cyprus rather than in Canada," said McKinnon.

McKinnon said in a statement issued Thursday that the Canadian forces in Cyprus make a fine and important contribution to UNFICYP and do much to enhance Canada's international reputation.

"I am concerned and disappointed that, for the sake of approximately $1.8 million, which is approximately one fifteenth of one per cent of our defence budget Jamieson is prepared to spoil the hard-earned reputation that Canada has built up," said the Conservative critic.

The main difference between Cyprus and Lebanon is that these are peacekeeping forces on Cyprus, he pointed out.

"Jamieson would have done much better to urge the parties in the conflict to work towards a compromise peace settlement instead of relying on UNFICYP to prevent conflict.

He accomplished absolutely nothing short of bringing shame to Canada by threatening to withdraw our troops for the sake of a few dollars," said McKinnon.

Tank Deal Worth $70M to Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian industry can hope for up to about $70 million in business from the forthcoming purchase of the West German Leopard tank by the defence department, it was reported Thursday.

Sources close to negotiations with the West Germans said Canada will spend about $190 million on the tank—$115 million for 128 of the machines and the rest for equipment.

Because there is no way any portion of the tanks can be made in Canada, the government has insisted that West Germany spend some money in Canada to make up for the heavy Canadian expenditure.

The sources said that under an agreement to be signed next week West Germany has agreed to spend 40 per cent of the $115 million in Canada and to use its best efforts to spend another 20 per cent.

The agreement is in effect a trade agreement negotiated with the trade department, sources said. Under it the West Germans agree to consider purchases from a long list of industrial goods.

The government is obtaining the tanks to replace the elderly Centurions that have been in use in Europe for years. The tanks are being obtained from the Kraus Maffei company but the offset arrangement was negotiated with the West German government, sources said.

Firms' Share Of Fringes Increasing

MONTREAL (CP) — The cost of employee benefits in Canada has increased by three per cent to 31.1 per cent of corporate payrolls in the last two years, a survey by Thorne Riddell Associates Ltd. says.

The term fringe benefits for non-salary expenditures to employees has given way to the term employee benefits because "in no way is 31 per cent a fringe cost to employers," the report said.

When the firm of management consultants began their first survey in 1954, employee benefits accounted for 15.1 per cent of payroll cost.

The proportion rose to 28.1 per cent by 1974. The studies were done every two years.

The survey covered 437,635 non-manufacturing and 150,223 manufacturing employees, with 155 employers participating.

Benefits include those which are legally required, such as unemployment insurance and the Canada or Quebec pension plans, as well as expenditures which vary from company to company such as private pension plans, vacations, rest periods and profit-sharing.

Paid time off constituted the biggest employee-benefit expense.

Total payroll cost for each employee, among the companies surveyed, averaged $16,108, of which $12,259 was gross salary and $3,849 employee benefits.

Anglicans, Catholics Pump Funding for Native Meeting

FORT SIMPSON, N.W.T. (CP) — The Anglican and Roman Catholic churches announced Thursday they have agreed to provide emergency funding for the Dene assembly of the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories scheduled to start today.

The assembly of some 200 native delegates from 25 Mackenzie Valley communities will be held here to complete their land claims proposal to the federal government before Nov. 1, the deadline set by the Indian and northern affairs department.

The emergency funding, totalling $100,000, resulted from an appeal by the brotherhood for assistance after normal sources of money from the federal goverment dried up following a decision by the executive of the Metis Association of the Northwest Territories not to participate in the assembly.

The Primate's World Relief and Development Fund of the Anglican Church of Canada and the Roman Catholic Church participated equally in the funding.

In announcing the funding, spokesmen for the two churches stressed they were not taking sides in the dispute but were trying to enable the assembly to proceed after the government refused to fund the Indian brotherhood.

Funding for land claims previously had been provided in the form of government loans to the two native organizations which, until the recent disagreement, were proceeding jointly to prepare their claim to 450,000 square miles of the Mackenzie for all people of native ancestry.

The remaining revenue sources for the brotherhood are specifically tied to programs or have been discontinued.

The land claims research was funded through a loan which would have been repaid from the proceeds of any settlement.

Georges Erasmus of Yellowknife, N.W.T., brotherhood president, stressed land claims had been proceeding "with funds that rightfully belong to the native people."

"This is the latest in a series of funding crises that have faced us ever since we began trying to get a settlement of our claims," he said.

"Whenever we get to a position where we have a solid proposal to present to the government, they start to tamper with our funding."

Man, 81, Has N.B. Singing

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM
The Telegraph Journal

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A familiar participant in community activities, the 81-year-old player leads the singing with the enjoyment he has brought to music all his life.

Within seconds, coaxed by David Thomson's Scottish burr, staid businessmen are singing like children.

Mr. Thomson, who retired in 1965 as director of music for schools in New Brunswick, launched a campaign 19 years earlier to make New Brunswick citizens aware of the need for music education. He was in charge of a Kiwanis project with the slogan "Let New Brunswick Sing."

With permission of local school boards, he went into the classrooms. Many lacked pianos but his tuning fork gave the students their musical cues.

An average days sonsisted of visiting six rural schools and meeting adults in the evening to talk about the importance of music in everyday life and particularly in education.

"I would demonstrate the joy to be gained from the making of music by having everyone engage in community singing," he said. "In some areas, instrumentalists were unearthed.

"They would arrive, trying to hide their fiddles and guitars. Gradually they would be coaxed into taking part. Then the hall would jump with the rhythm of country music.

"It was there that the seed was planted for a program of music education in all our schools."

Letters begin to pour into Fredericton requesting expanded school music programs.

When Mr. Thompson was appointed supervisor of music in 1949, his objectives were the same but the methods changed. He talked to school boards and women's groups, addressed school assemblies and taught teachers to teach music.

At one assembly, the teenage boys "couldn't give a darn about music," he recalled.

"I asked them how many played hockey. All put up their hands.

"I told them to imagine they were the best players on their team and that they had the puck on a breakaway. They were racing towards the goal.

" 'What happens next?' I asked them.

"They replied, 'I score.'

" 'No,' I told them. 'You fall flat on your face because you haven't the breath control to reach the net. If you'd sung more, you'd have developed that breath control to finish the job.' "

The boys showed much greater interest in music after that.

Mr. Thompson encouraged establishment of "little festivals" in various areas of the province. Many developed into major musical events.

There were six full-time music teachers in New Brunswick schools when Mr. Thomson was appointed. When he retired, there were close to 100.

He learned to play the piano at the age of eight. By age 14, a Scottish theatre proprietor was dispatching a horse and carriage so that young David could play for silent movies in two different areas the same night.

Mr. Thomson played for silent movies again in Saint John after emigrating from Scotland at 18 until he gave it up for a daytime job as a junior office clerk.

But music continued to be his main interest. After serving overseas with Saint John's 26th Battalion from 1914 to 1918, he returned to the city and again got into the musical spotlight.

He was a member of the Brunswick Singers, a male quartet that gained fame on stage and radio, and led sessions at the old Capitol Theatre, "singing away the blues" during the Depression.

Mr. Thomson also led the Carriden Choir from 1936 until it was disbanded in 1966.

He looks back fondly on his career.

"I haven't made a lot of money but I've had a lot of happiness. I only wish I were 30 years younger and could get at it hammer and tongs again."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

One of the three court sections in Victoria provincial court will be idle during all four scheduled working days next week — unless last-minute trials can be arranged — and two judges said Thursday they're not happy about it.

Judge William Ostler, the first to hear of the problem, said the incident showed all the blame for "a very long backlog" should not be put on judges and Judge D. K. McAdam, who finally agreed to delay the case, indicated he did so reluctantly.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson also was reluctant in asking for the delay of a preliminary hearing of a narcotics conspiracy charge against six persons arrested in April.

Two of the six were held in custody for some time and Ostler had tried to arrange the hearing for July but some defence lawyers could not make it. So the hearing was set for the three weeks beginning Oct. 12, Oct. 25 and Nov. 1.

Now, said Branson, two of the defence lawyers were on opposite sides in a murder trial at Nanaimo which will go through next week. He said the prosecution had subpoenaed 35 witnesses and would only hope the conspiracy hearing would take no more than its two other scheduled weeks.

"You can expect to go to jail if there's any repetition of this sort of conduct," Ostler told Thomas Edward Lowery, 19, of 4252 Interurban, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of mischief and admitted a similar conviction last May.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Lowery damaged a wooden barrier between a Beaver Lake Park picnic area and parking lot in removing it, then drove his pickup truck over the grassy picnic area, doing $80 damage to the grass and a table.

Lowery, who said he had already paid for the damage, was fined $100, put on probatios for six months and ordered to do 100 hours of community work.

Former Victoria area resident Raymond Douglas Saulnier, 34, now of Peachland, B.C., was charged with defrauding the public of about $1,688 June 25 in Saanich by submitting false claims to ICBC concerning a car fire.

He chose trial in provincial court, pleaded not guilty and was remanded to next Wednesday for choice of a trial date. Ostler allowed Saulnier's release on $1,500 surety bail.

Ostler concluded a fitness hearing for Joyce Cherniwchan, 41, of 1029 Esquimalt, by ruling on the basis of medical evidence that she was unfit to stand trial and would be sent to a provincial mental institution.

Ms. Cherniwchan faced a number of Victoria and Saanich false pretences charges dating back to Aug. 24, one day after she was put on probation for similar offences. She will be held until institution officials decide she is fit to be tried and the B.C. cabinet approves.

One hundred hours of community work and attendance at a weekend work camp were conditions of a one-year term of probation set by Ostler for Brian Birks, 17, of 2721 Henderson. Birks pleaded guilty Aug. 25 to a charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana May 26 at his residence in Port Alberni. It was his third conviction for possession of a narcotic.

A bail hearing for David Carl Thompson, 17, of HMCS Yukon, ended when Ostler allowed his release on an undertaking to return. Thompson was charged Wednesday with criminally negligent driving early that day in Victoria county and with theft of a car in Victoria. He was remanded one week to seek legal assistance.

Michael Francis MacLeod, 49, no fixed address, was sentenced by Ostler to five months in jail followed by one year of probation during which he must make good $1,658 in bad cheques. MacLeod pleaded guilty Aug. 30 to four Victoria counts of uttering the cheques Aug. 13 to 26 and Ostler said his record seemed due mainly to alcoholism.

Jose Arthur Poelmans, 27, of 1322 Blanshard, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft Sept. 24 of a transistor tester and a signal tester from a car radio firm on Burnside and was fined $350 by Ostler and put on probation for six months. Mulligan said Poelmans, who had one previous theft conviction, pawned the two items for $35.

Adam Alfred Milne, 22, of Eldon Place in Victoria, was found guilty by Ostler after a trial on a charge of possession of a knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace May 26 and was fined $250. Milne swung the knife at a policeman in his residence but said he did not intend to injure.

Boota Singh, 22, of 557 Mountfield, pleaded guilty to one Saanich charge of driving Sept. 21 while impaired by a drug and a second of possession of marijuana at the same time. Ostler levied fines of $500 for the drug impaired driving and $75 for the possession.

In traffic court, Judge Blake Allan ordered intermittent 20-day jail terms for two persons who pleaded guilty to separate Sidney charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were Richard Henry Fee, 32, of 1974 Hovey, stopped Stept. 16, and Leonard Peter Georgeson, 19, of 1892 Swarts Bay, stopped Sept. 23.

Largest traffic fine of the day was a total of $800 levied by Judge Allan against Robert William Thomas, 20, of 856 Claremont, who pleaded guilty to a Sidney charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Sept. 17.

Fines totalling $750 were set for Trent Harold White, 18, of 8903 Mainwaring, after he pleaded guilty to a Sidney charge of failing to remain and driving Sept. 18 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent.

Three persons pleaded guilty to separate Sidney charges of "over .08" driving. They were Gordon David Cameron, 22, of 9905 - 5th, stopped Sept. 17 and fined $450; Lee Stanley Marechek, 44, of 10018 Simkin, Sept. 17 and $400, and Dioliveira Fernando Martins, 35, of 2143 Brethour, Sept. 18 and $600.

Kirpal Singh Basi, 36, of 363 Fairview, pleaded guilty to a Colwood charge of "over .08" driving June 4 and was fined $400.

JUDGMENT RESERVED ON APPEAL

Police Pick Up Belknap Ward

A 13-year-old Nanaimo boy, recently at the centre of a court case involving B.C.'s superintendent of child welfare, was picked up today in Nanaimo after fleeing from a Saanich group home.

Nanaimo RCMP said the boy was picked up by plainclothes police on a downtown street and placed in jail pending an investigation of his actions since he left the home Thursday afternoon.

Meanwhile, Mr. Justice John Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court reserved decision in Vancouver Thursday in the appeal by Victor Belknap, child welfare superintendent, against a conviction and $250 fine levied Aug. 30 in Nanaimo provincial court.

At that time the 13-year-old, one of thousands under Belknap's supervision, was found guilty of a $50 breaking, entering and theft.

But because of the boy's lengthy record of crimes during escapes from detention, Judge Stanley Wardill fined Belknap because he is responsible for the juvenile.

There were two main questions debated in the appeal:

Can a civil servant be found personally liable for actions by those falling within his jurisdiction?

Should the Crown — in this case the Attorney-General's department — appeal a conviction from an action brought about in a lower court by a Crown prosecutor?

Ralph Hutchinson, counsel for the provincial government, said that Belknap was the juvenile's guardian "not by choice — he has to accept the people sent to him."

For Belknap to be held legally responsible for the juvenile found guilty by Judge Wardill, he said, there would have to be some form of "connivance" between the juvenile and himself.

Richard Bledsoe, also representing the Crown, argued that in the Belknap case there had been no prior notification to the accused that Judge Wardill intended to make him legally rsponsible for the juvenile's theft, as required under the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

"He wasn't given the opportunity to appear and hear what the judge was about to do," Bledsoe said, suggesting this was "a denial of natural justice."

John Hall, a friend of the court representing Judge Wardill, said the law on the "whole convoluted area of Crown officers" evolved from ships of war centuries ago "and we are going to develop new laws—those of old England do not apply in British Columbia."

Although Belknap had not personally been given prior knowledge of the judge's intended action against him, Hall said, his section of the human resources department in Nanaimo had.

Furthermore, he said, Judge Wardill had found "lack of supervision and care" of the juvenile who "was running wild."

In the end, Hall argued, 'the best interests of the child are the essence of the case" and the judgment should stand.

Meanwhile in Vancouver, Dennis Kent, co-ordinator of juvenile services in the corrections branch of the attorney-general's department, said Thursday that local Crown prosecutors will soon have the authority to ask that juvenile delinquents be tried in adult court without first referring the request to Victoria.

Presses Idle On Labor's Protest Day

The Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist won't publish on Oct. 14, labor's day of protest.

Members of the Pressmen's Union employed by Victoria Press Ltd., publisher of the two daily papers, have voted not to report for work on that day, thus effectively shutting down the operation.

The mailers have also decided to stay off the job as has the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union, which represents printers at Victoria Press as well as printers at the Vancouver Sun and Province.

Members of the Newspaper Guild in the editorial and business offices of Victoria Press have been asked by national headquarters to stay on the job.

In the event the two papers do not publish, a Victoria Press spokesman said today all subscribers will receive a 15-cent rebate on their monthly bill and carriers will not lose any of their normal monthly profits as a result of the missed day's delivery.

As well as doing without their daily papers on Oct. 14, it appears Greater Victoria residents will also experience some delays in telephone service.

About 225 Victoria area members of the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. voted Thursday night to support their officers call to observe the day of protest.

There are about 630 Victoria-area members of the federation which represents plant workers such as linemen and installers as well as clerical staff and operators.

A spokesman said if the operators do not report for work, there will be no noticeable difference for local or direct dialed calls but there could be some delays in getting information or placing calls through supervisors filling in for the operators.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Labor Relations Board announced it will rule Tuesday — two day's before the protest day — on whether the protest is legal.

Board Chairman Paul Weiler said the board, acting on an application from B.C. Hydro, will rule on whether the work stoppage would be a strike within the meaning of the provincial Labor code.

Support for the protest has come from the B.C. Railway unions.

Jack Whittaker, chairman of the joint Council of B.C. Railway unions, says the railway will be shut down for 24 hours as the council has unanimously endorsed the attack on federal wage controls.

On the national scene, delegates to the 30th convention of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers in Montreal, have urged their 40,000 members to support the day of protest.

Workers in several brotherhood locals in Montreal, New Brunswick and parts of Ontario have rejected a walkout, but leaders of locals in Vancouver, Toronto and Winnipeg say their members support strike action.

TOWN TALK

Premier Bill Bennett made a pay-off to a political rival this week, but the financial transaction is not likely to turn into another Sky Shops Affair.

It was all in the cause of charity.

It's not Finkelstein's first campaign.

Last year he was campaign manager for the Liberal candidate in the Kelowna riding who ran against, and lost to, Premier Bennett.

Gerry Splatt, a regular Town Talk reader and recently retired manager of Royal London Wax Museum, was surprised to read here that new Canadian figures were on display in the place.

Splatt invited us back for a second look, urging us to keep a sharp eye for John Diefenbaker, Sir John A. Macdonald, Field Marshall Alexander, Sir James Douglas, Ge. James Wolfe and his adversary Louis de Montcalm, Capt. George Vancouver, Capt. James Cook, Chief Dan George, and a Mountie.

Yes, Gerry, they do have Canadian content. But we are plumping for "truly Canadian figures of stature," to quote the previous item. People of international acclaim.

Six of your examples, though important to Canada, are not Canadians.

SIMMONS

Members of the Victoria police force aren't the only ones to strike it rich on sweeps and lotteries these days. How about employees of the fire department?

Chief. Eric Simmons and two secretaries in his office, Mrs. Anne Crawford and Mrs. Tenna Johnston, shared the grand prize — a new car — in the Saanich Rotary-CFAX fishing derby raffle.

Not only that. And as they sold the ticket to themselves they got the seller's prize, a new stereo set.

Cashing in both prizes they realized a net gain of $5,300 or $1,766 each.

Their first decision was to thank the young lady who had pulled their ticket from the drum — 10-year-old Julia Leong. The thanks came in a card and a crisp hundred-dollar bill.

Simmons says they're so confident their fortune is on the rise they're reinvesting a portion of the winnings in other lotto and sweep tickets. They've even formed a "company."

Authenticity can only go so far, operators of the old-English style Mediaeval Inn discovered early today — an open hearth cooking fire just doesn't cut it with the city fire department.

Firefighters were called in at about 5:20 a.m. to extinguish a kitchen fire caused when a cook from the previous night's shift left a pan of meat bones in the oven and forgot to turn off the heat.

Some smoke damage was also caused, but the fire was not serious. Deputy Chief Carl Coates said. He estimated damage at $500.

Unlike Alberta, B.C. is not going to install metric speed signs before the big conversion day next September. Says Art Rowbottom, metric engineer with the highways department.

Rowbottom says the national plan is to introduce the new signs "cold turkey" and B.C. will follow suit.

He says there is no plan to post dual signs to ease motorists into thinking metric either.

"That would be ridiculous," he says.

Why? Well, for one thing the conversation isn't exact; 30 miles an hour is 48 kilometres an hour, not 50, as the speed limit will be a year from now.

What beautiful timing for Frank Conibear of 2170 Evergreen Place!

In 1960 Conibear received a $600 cash award and a certificate of merit from the American Humane Association.

A former trapper, Conibear invented the trap in the 1920s when trapping in the Northwest Territories. It was patented in 1968.

The trap is being widely sold as a less cruel alternative to the leg-hold trap. It's light, compact, easy to handle and really effective for small animals which are usually killed immediately.

Intern Pact To End

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria General Hospital has moved to terminate a contract with the Professional Association of Residents and Interns.

Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations at the hospital, said a letter was written to PARI Sept. 20 asking to cancel the contract.

The contract will end a month after the letter was sent, Oct. 20, he said.

O'Brien said the move was taken after the 10 interns at the hospital chose not to belong to the association, set up about three years ago to negotiate wages and working conditions for residents and interns at B.C. hospitals.

Dr. Albert Doucette, one of the interns at Victoria General, said when the latest group of interns arrived at the hospital in June they chose not to join PARI.

Instead, he said, they opted to form their own bargaining group and have one of the interns negotiate on behalf of the rest.

Doucette said Victoria General is unique among the province's five teaching hospitals which have agreements with PARI because it has the smallest number of interns and no residents.

He said PARI is more effective for the larger hospitals, such as Vancouver General where there are 300 residents who form a major power bloc in the hospital and are there for up to four years.

Interns only put in one year at the hospitals, he added.

He said if Victoria General interns had belonged to PARI they wouldn't actually have a member at the bargaining table as they will under the proposed arrangement.

Doucette said arrangements for negotiations for the 10 interns will begin once the PARI contract with the hospital ends Oct. 20.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, said 15 of the 16 residents at Jubilee have joined PARI.

He said negotiations are under way to work out a new contract between PARI and the five teaching hospitals. The last contract expired Dec. 31, 1975.

Dr. Pickles, who is chairman of the hospitals' negotiating committee, said both sides are "fairly close" to an agreement.

The provinces residents and interns went on strike for 10 days in 1975 in a dispute with the B.C. Health Association over wages and working conditions.

Dicey Skies For Holiday

Like the popular British pub drink, the weather will be half and half on the holiday weekend.

Saturday will be much like today but Sunday could be "a tossup", according to a spokesman for the Victoria weather office at the Victoria International Airport.

Beginning either Sunday or Monday temperatures are expected to cool, skies become cloudy, accompanied by the wet stuff that's plagued British Columbia most of the summer.

Manpower Survey Forecasts Grey Days Ahead for Jobless

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's economy took another downturn in September and the outlook for the remainder of this year is fairly grim, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

The latest developments:

—The lumber market will be jolted by a decline in prices and demand within weeks, according to reports from the main market area, the U.S. Atlantic Coast. Vancouver Island sawmills will have to locate new markets to maintain production levels.

—Consumer spending was down about 5 per cent in Victoria during September, compared with a usual increase of 15 per cent. Retail sales continue to be slow this month.

—Closure of the grain elevator in Victoria will have a spinoff effect this fall and will lead to layoffs in some supply industries. Longshoremen will also be affected.

—The number of available jobs continues to be low. There were 1,900 jobs listed on the Canada Manpower office during September, down 10 per cent from the previous September, and there were about 8,000 people who sought work at the Canada Manpower office during the month.

—Restaurant sales were down in September, except for the fast-food chains.

Purdy said the main problem continues to be weakness in the forest products industry.

"There are indications there will be an improvement by spring but in the meantime things may get a bit worse," he said.

Ed Vermiere, manager of the B.C. Forest Products sawmill, confirmed that markets are expected to turn weak in the United States for the remainder of the year. The company is trying to divert sales to the European Common Market and Japan.

"The United Kingdom is a major customer of ours but they are having difficulty buying our lumber because of the devaluation of the pound," he said.

Present staff level at the sawmill is 439, which is about normal. The mill operates at a peak capacity with about 500 workers.

Vermiere said the company hopes to ride out the storm and keep all 485 employees on during the winter.

"We try to maintain stability of employment and not lay off workers whenever there is a fluctuation in the market," he said.

The company has storage problems because of its relatively-small acreage on Gorge Road but is moving lumber out on scows to its Crofton dock as quickly as possble. Some lumber may stay in Crofton for a long period of time before it moves to market, he said.

Frank Lourson, assistant manager of the BCFP plywood plant, said staff level is down to 245, only 67 per cent of capacity, and there is no hope of increasing the total at this time. The company hopes to maintain the present staff level, however, despite poor market conditions.

Meanwhile Purdy said a Canada Manpower survey compiled by information officer Dan Bowes, shows retail sales surged for the first week in September during the back-to-school period but flattened out after that.

"Except for sale days, the stores had a quiet month."

He said this trend is continuing through October and there may not be a buying surge until the Christmas season.

This caution reflects the generally weak economic conditions.

"We remain optimistic that a recovery will be under way by March. Things will get better but the immediate outlook is not good."

Kansas City Not Serving Yanks Now

By Associated Press

The relationship has changed since Kansas City was a willing contributor to baseball championships won by the New York Yankees.

When the Yankees won five consecutive world championships from 1949 to 1953, many of their players came from the club's farm club in Kansas City.

And even after Kansas City received a major league franchise the club made trades with the Yankees which appeared to benefit New York's championship bids.

Roger Maris hit 61 home runs in 1961 after being acquired in a deal from Kansas City. He, Clete Boyer and Ralph Terry were former Kansas City players who were members of the 1964 Yankee team — the last one to win a league championship.

While Yankees' history is filled with memories of past championships, Kansas City is going after its first league crown when the baseball playoffs begin Saturday. The A's never finished higher than sixth before moving to Oakland in 1968 and the Royals best effort until this season was a pair of second-place finishes.

"We're working to start our dynasty," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog as his team prepared to start its bid in the best-of-five American League playoff in Kansas City Saturday afternoon against Billy Martin's Yanks.

"Tradition is one thing," said Yankees coach Yogi Berra, a hero of former championships, "but this is now."

And while the two teams are battling for the AL title, Cincinnati, the defending world champion, tires to become the first club to repeat as NL champion since the St. Louis Cardinals won in 1967-68, against Philadelphia.

The Phillies are in the league playoffs for the first time since baseball began its two division format in 1969 and are seeking their first league title since 1950.

Martin has brought his Yankees to Kansas City early because he wants the team familiar with the artificial surface. Martin, a star for the Yankees when they were dominating the AL before artificial surfaces came into existence, doesn't like the surface.

"I hate that stuff," Martin growled Thursday as New York took the field for a two-hour practice. "You don't play the ball. It plays you.

"It will be an advantage for hem the Royals because they know how to play it," he said. "I think the stuff takes away from baseball."

Royals' first baseman John Mayberry agrees.

"I've seen teams come in here and practically give games away," said Mayberry, "because they don't know how to play it."

"You can see the ball just as easy on grass or Astroturf," said Yankee center fielder Mickey Rivers. "It's no big deal, man."

But his Royals' counterpart, Amos Otis, who has patrolled center field here since Royals Stadium opened in 1973, laughed at Rivers' confidence.

"He might find out different," Otis said. "It's one thing to practice on the turf, but when the time comes to make a play you don't have time to stop and think. It'll give us about a 50 per cent edge in some situations."

There's no such talk in the NL, where both the Phillies and Reds play on artificial surfaces at home and in many of their road games. A key question in that series, which opens Saturday night in Philadelphia, is whether the Phillies can stop the base stealing of Cincinnati.

"I'm not sure our catchers can handle them," said Philadelphia first baseman Dick Allen. "I intend to do a lot of talking to any Cincinnati player that reaches first base. If I can stop their concentration just for a second, it just might make them one step slower."

One player Allen can expect to talk to frequently during the series is Joe Morgan, the NL's most valuable player in 1975. Morgan, who stole 60 bases this season, batted .320 this year with 151 hits and 111 runs batted in. He also can expect visits from Pete Rose, who led the league in hits with 215, runs with 130 and doubles with 42 while finishing with a .324 batting average and Ken Griffey, who finished second in the league batting race with a .336 average.

And the Reds will have to contain the home run power of Mike Schmidt, who led the league with 38 while driving in 106 runs. Greg Luzinski, who knocked in 95 runs, is another slugger who the Reds' pitchers will have to contain.

Bruin Fans Express Displeasure

By The Canadian Press

Boston Bruins fans demonstrated their displeasure Thursday night with the National Hockey League team for having let 10-year star defenceman Bobby Orr go to Chicago Black Hawks.

Only 9,921 — almost 5,000 under capacity — showed up at the Boston Garden to see the Bruins open their season with a 6-2 victory over Minnesota North Stars.

To make matters worse, Orr scored a goal and assisted on two others in his debut with the Black Hawks, who recorded a 6-4 triumph over the Blues at St. Louis, where 15,757 watched.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Montreal Canadiens whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 10-1, New York Islanders blanked Philadelphia Flyers 3-0, Washington Capitals and Detroit Red Wings tied 3-3 and Atlanta Flames dumped Los Angeles Kings 4-2.

In the first game of the World Hockey Association season, Cincinnati Stingers downed Minnesota Fighting Saints 7-2. (See story on Page 24.)

While miffed at Orr's departure, the smallest Boston crowd since the 1966-67 season may have approved of another off-season deal. Rick Middleton, acquired from New York Rangers for Ken Hodge, scored three goals to highlight the Bruins attack.

Orr, who played 10 games with Boston last year before undergoing knee surgery and missing the rest of the season, signed as a free agent with the Hawks in a five-year, $2-million contract.

The Parry Sound, Ont., product was on the ice for 38 minutes, showing himself off to good advantage after being selected the outstanding player in the recent Canada Cup tournament.

"I had no pain in my knee at all," he said. "I'm not kidding myself about being in prime condition. It will take time."

Chicago coach Billy Reay had Orr on the ice whenever the Hawks had a man advantage. The coach said that will continue.

"I'm going to play him the full two minutes of all power plays," Reay said. "Why shouldn't I? He's the best."

The Chicago victory spoiled the St. Louis coaching debut of Emile Francis, who left the Rangers after 15 years in various capacities, including general manager.

"What's that?" seems to be question posed by Doug Kerson of Victoria Rays and Oak Bay's Kerry Blain. Tied up with checking duties, players had difficulty getting to puck during South Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Thursday at Oak Bay. Host club won 8-2. See story on page 24.

A Busy Signing Day

Times News Services

Changes among officials and managerial personnel took up a major portion of major league baseball news Thursday.

Home run champion Hank Aaron will trade his familiar No. 44 for a business suit when the Atlanta Braves begin their 1977 season.

The 42-year-old Aaron was named director of player development by Braves owner Ted Turner in a move which was possibly the worst kept secret in Atlanta sports history.

It had been speculated since July that Aaron would rejoin the Braves in a front office capacity after his two-year contract with the American League Milwaukee Brewers expired following the 1976 season.

"I feel like I'm going back to 1954, like a rookie," Aaron said.

Joe Altobelli, an obscure name but a veteran minor league manager, was named to manage the San Francisco Giants, a team which struggled most of the year in the National League West cellar before finishing fourth with a 74-88 record. He succeeds Bill Rigney.

It will be a big change for the 44-year-old Detroit native, who has had a highly successful 11-year stint in the minor leagues after three so-so years as a major league player.

Twice stymied in his bid for a major league job, Vern Rapp has succeeded on his third time around.

The veteran of 15 minor league managerial seasons is coming home as field boss of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"This is like a dream come true," the 48-year-old Rapp said when he was named to succeed Red Schoendienst, who was fired two days earlier.

Rapp, a native son originally signed with St. Louis as a catcher in 1946.

Los Angeles Dodgers have hired Preston Gomez as coach.

Gomez, a former Dodgers' coach who went on to manage the San Diego Padres and Houston Astros, recently resigned his coaching post with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Gregg Gets Four To Lead Cougars

Anderson now has nine goals while centre Gary Lupul and right-winger Curt Fraser scored once each to bring their season totals to seven each.

The line's 23 goals is well over half the total team production of 37 in seven games.

It was the Cats' third win in six road games and the second straight over Bombers. The Victoria club takes on Pats in Regina tonight and have four more on the road before returning to Memorial Arena and a meeting with Portland Winter Hawks, Oct. 16.

Anderson, who also has 12 assists so far this season, did most of his damage after Flin Flon had battled back from a 3-1 deficit to take a 4-3 lead.

Lupul connected on a power-play at 15:47 of the second period to tie the game and then Anderson scored the final three goals of the game. His first came a mere 34 seconds after Lupul connected and he scored the only two goals of the third period.

Steve Amiss, a rookie who stood out for Nanaimo Clippers last season, made his first start in goal and blocked 37 shots, including 17 in the second period.

Victoria led 2-1 after the first period on goals by Fraser and Bill Jobson and Anderson scored his first goal early in the second frame.

Ray Neufeld, Jordy Douglas, Kim Davis and Al Aime scored for Flin Flon.

Victoria manager-coach Pat Ginnell is pleased with the improving Cougars defence and singled out George Philipoff as playing especially well.

In the only other game Thursday, Brandon Wheat Kings tripped visiting Calgary Centennials 7-4 to run an unbeaten streak to six games.

MEXICANS DISPLEASED WITH CANADIAN COACH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mexican sports reporters and photographers and Ignacio Trelles, coach of Mexico's World Cup soccer team, were upset Thursday when Canadian coach Eckhard Krautzun failed to show up for a news conference.

The two teams meet Sunday in a World Cup qualifying round game here and the news conference was set up so sportswriters from both countries could question the coaches.

The Mexican writers and photographers complained bitterly about Krautzun's absence and Trelles said he had given up a luncheon meeting with his players to attend the news conference and would have liked to have seen his opposite number on hand.

Krautzun said later he has been suffering from influenza and was unable to attend the news conference.

He said he had talked to Mexican reporters and posed for pictures Wednesday and there were no problems.

U.S. Soccer Team Back on the Field

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The United States national soccer team returned to the practice field Thursday after a short-lived strike that ended in acceptance of a compromise salary offer from the U.S. Soccer Federation.

Team spokesman Bobby Smith said the team voted late Wednesday night to approve the USSF's offer of $250 weekly for each of the 20 team members, plus $50 additional a game for the four World Cup qualifying matches.

The American team, comprised mainly of players from the North American Soccer League, already has tied Mexico and Canada. It plays the same two teams again in addition to an exhibition match against Argentina's best team in New York City.

The team struck at 6 p.m. Wednesday, contending mistreatment by the USSF. Smith said the latest contract offer from the USSF came shortly after the walkout began.

Smith said the players were upset for several reasons, mainly the USSF's plans to pay them $250 a week and its failure to disclose their salaries until one month after the team began practice.

Neilson Sparks Athletics

Gordon Neilson fired three goals and chalked up two assists Thursday to spark Victoria Athletics to a 6-3 South Island Big Six Hockey League victory over Juan de Fuca Merchants at Pearkes Arena.

Brian Hamilton also had a five-point evening with two goals and three assists while Dave Parenteau added a single goal.

Barry McLachlan, Daryl Ell and Frank Clark connected for Merchants in the third period after Athletics had chalked up period leads of 1-0 and 3-0.

Public Meetings Called For Enhancement Program

Public input, a required part of the planning process for the joint federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program, is now being sought.

One of the ways opinions will be solicited will be through a series of "community inquiries" to be held throughout B.C. starting Nov. 1 in Victoria.

The program is an effort, through a combination of both natural and artificial enhancement techniques, to bring stocks of both salmon and sea-run trout (particularly steelhead) back to the abundance they were at during the beginning of the century.

The format of the inquiries, which will be chaired by an impartial consultant, is simple. Those who have submitted briefs in advance will be heard first, those bringing briefs to the inquiry will be heard next and those wishing only to make a verbal statement will be scheduled last.

Time allocation for oral presentations will range from 15 minutes (for those with formal briefs) to approximately 10 minutes.

Officials are particularly looking for answers to the following questions:

—What are likely to be the most effective ways to gain better protection of the salmon and steelhead resources?

—Should fisheries agencies go about producing more fish? And if so, how? Why?

—How should the public become involved in salmonid enhancement?

—How might fisheries management improve its overall performance?

Hearings will be held on Vancouver Island in Victoria (Nov. 1), Duncan (Nov. 2), Port Alberni (Nov. 3), Nanaimo (Nov. 3), Campbell River (Nov. 4) and Port Hardy (Nov. 5).

Each inquiry will run from 5:30 to 10 p.m. with the exception of the one at Port Alberni, which runs from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Ron MacLeod, program director for the salmonid enhancement scheme, has expressed the hope "that individual citizens as well as organized groups would take advantage of this opportunity to share their ideas and concerns."

Exact locations of each inquiry should be announced shortly.

Meanwhile, everyone concerned about the declining quality and quantity of sea-run cutthroat trout, steelhead and salmon fishing should gather some ideas together.

NIBBLES: Some people in the fish and wildlife branch are sensitive about the habit a few federal fisheries officials have of leaving the "id" out of salmonid when referring to the enhancement program . . . But guess where the latest reference to "salmon enhancement" appeared? . . . In the branch's monthly newsletter!

Tie-Breaker For Golfers?

Round No. 4 could be the tie-breaker in the Winspear Trophy matches for Vancouver Island's golfers.

The fourth annual tournament pitting amateurs against professionals will be played this Saturday and Sunday at Glen Meadows Golf Club.

The 10-man teams face off in Scotch foursomes on Saturday and wind it up with singles matches Sunday.

Teams are chosen on the basis of points earned during appearances in various Island tournaments.

Both teams have been forced to make two changes. Junior Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill and Uplands and Campbell River's Ross Logan replaced Cec Ferguson and Dave Mick on the amateur team.

Ferguson, the leading point-getter this year, has turned professional while Mick, now living in Vancouver, has a prior commitment.

Work duties also have taken Colwood's Bob Hogarth and John Morgan from the professional team. Their spots have been taken by Bill Penny of Glen Meadows and Nanaimo's Norm Jackson.

Teams are all even heading into the fourth meeting. They played to a 7½-7½ draw in the first meeting, the pros won the second 9½-4½ while the amateurs recorded an 8½-6½ victory last year.

Weekend draws (listing amateur players first):

GOLF ROUNDUP

INZAI, Japan (AP) — Lee Trevino used sign language and a hot putter to run off five birdies over the final nine holes and move into a share of the lead with AllenMiller after the first round of the $300,000 Pacific Masters' Golf Tournament Thursday.

The amiable Texan fired a four-under-par 67 over the 7,187-yard Sobu Country Club course to tie Miller, who finished second to Gene Littler here last year.

Japan's Jumbo Ozaki was third at 68, Littler was fourth at 69 and eight others including U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate, Rod Curl and Jim Simons, were tied for fifth at 70.

Trevino, playing in a two-some with Taiwan's Lu Liang-Huan, managed just one birdie and had two bogies on the front nine before he decided to try and get some help negotiating the tricky green from his female caddy.

"Because of the language barrier, I did not ask my girl caddy for advice on the first nine," said Trevino. "But when I saw Lu ask his caddy to read the greens for him, I did the same on the back nine.

"I gestured to her asking how I should aim my putts and she began showing me. That is why I got five birdies on the back nine. My eyesight is bad and the greens looked flat to me."

VILAMOURA, Portugal (AP) — Scrambling for the greens on a windswept course, three Americans held a seven-stroke lead over France after two rounds Thursday in their chase for a sixth straight women's world amateur team golf title.

Nancy Lopez of the U.S. widened her individual lead over France's veteran Catherine Lacoste de Prado to six strokes by shooting the lowest round for the second day in a row. The 18-year-old Tulsa University sophomore scored a two-over-par 75 for a 36-hole total of 147.

Third behind Lopez and Lacoste was South Africa's Alison Sheard with 156.

At the halfway point of the 25-nation tournament, it seemed that only complete collapse could stop the American team.

Standings based on the two best individual scores from each three-member team gave the United States 304, followed by France at 311, Italy and South Africa with 316, and Canada with 317.

Betty Cole of Edmonton and Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver both shot 78s Thursday while Dale Shaw of Victoria had an 82.

In Wednesday's first round, Shaw had a 78, Palmer an 83 and Cole an 87.

Player, seeking his sixth title here, beat Palmer 5 and 4 in this event which matches some of the world's greatest golfers in head-to-head competition. Player fired a three-under par 70 in the morning round over the 6969 yard Wentworth Course to go ahead of Palmer by three holes.

The American rallied to within one hole early in the afternoon round, but then Player pulled away for good with an eagle to win the 22nd hole, and birdies on the 28th and 31st.

Player will face Irwin in today's semi-finals. Irwin defeated 19-year-old Spaniard Severiano Ballesteros 2-up.

Irwin blew a three-hole lead to finish tied with Ballesteros after the first 18 holes as both players shot par 73s. The Spaniard led briefly early in the second round, but Irwin came back with a birdie on the 33rd hole to move in front by one. And at the 35th, Ballesteros drove out of bounds and took a bogie six while Irwin birdied the hole to clinch the match.

Floyd and Graham will meet in the other semi-final. Floyd knocked out the last British hope, Brian Barnes, 2-up and Graham ousted Hubert Green 3 and 2. Green had troubles putting, fell four holes behind after the morning round and never caught up.

4-Wheeler Finds Way...

Final rally in a series of five Four-Wheel Drive Association of B.C.-sanctioned events held throughout the province this year gets underway at 10 a.m. Saturday and resumes at same time Sunday.

League Office Erases Blot from Bat Crown

NEW YORK (AP) — American League president Lee MacPhail said Thursday he is satisfied that Kansas City's George Brett won the batting championship "on merit" and that is "unjust to imply otherwise."

MacPhail's office conducted an investigation after Brett won the title with a .333 average, beating team-mate Hal McRae by a fraction of a percentage point.

The winning margin was determined in the last at bat of the baseball season for each player. Brett got an inside-the-park home run on a ball that was apparently misjudged by Minnesota left fielder Steve Brye. Then, when McRae followed by grounding out, he charged Twins' manager Gene Mauch, claiming that Mauch had ordered Brye to let Brett's drive drop in.

"This office has questioned many people with respect to the last day of the batting race in the American League," MacPhail said.

"Although it is not always possible to know with certainty what governs men's actions, there is no evidence or reason to believe that any plays in the game of Oct. 3 . . . were unfairly motivated.

"Lacking such, it is unjust to imply otherwise, simply by citing one misplay. A season of baseball includes many great plays and inevitable misplays. This office is satisfied that the American League batting championship was won on merit."

Mauch said Brye had told him he misjudged the ball.

"I completely trust and believe in Steve," the manager said. "I would not have him on our club if I felt he would intentionally fail to make a play or give his best effort at any time."

Brett, meanwhile, said that he plans to ask commissioner Bowie Kuhn to declare the batting title a tie between himself and McRae.

"I didn't see Brye miss the play because I was running but everybody tells me that any batboy could have caught it. In view of what happened, I want the commissioner to change the standings and make it a tie."

Stingers Connect

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rick Dudley scored two goals and Rich Leduc had another and four assists to lead Cincinnati Stingers to a 7-2 victory over Minnesota Fighting Saints in the opening World Hockey Association game Thursday for both clubs.

The improved Stingers, in their second season, kept the Saints bottled up for nearly the entire game before Minnesota got two goals in the final minutes. Cincinnati scored on three of four power plays and the scoring was spread among six players.

Blaine Stoughton scored on a rebound shot and Pierre Guite connected on the first power play as Cincinnati outshot Minnesota 14-3 in the first period.

Cincinnati broke the game open with four goals in the second period with the scoring going to Jacques Locas, Dudley, Dennis Sobchuk and Leduc.

Murrell's Three Spark Oak Bay

Wayne Proceviat scored both Victoria goals.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Adding a dash of competition to the holiday weekend calendar, the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will hold an invitational race to Port Angeles on Saturday.

The race gets under way at 10 a.m. in the Clover Point area and finishes just off the Port Angeles Yacht Club. Boats will be racing under Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings.

Several boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association, which co-operates with RVYC on winter racing schedules, are expected to take part.

Teading for the Mainland this weekend to take on their Vancouver counterparts will be 12 sailors of Victoria's Thunderbird fleet.

Under skippers Jim Blohm, John Booth, Gerry Porter and Bud Hall, they will sail a five-race series, working out of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club at Jerico Beach.

Oak Bay waters will be the scene of some pretty, high-calibre dinghy sailing this weekend with 20 women from across Canada competing in the Canadian Yachting Association's annual women's championships.

The competitors had a familiarization tour and practice race today and get down to serious sailing Saturday. Starting at 9:30 a.m., there will be three races Saturday and Sunday, plus two on Monday. The sailors will use the RVYC's Flying Juniors, plus spinnakers.

In waters off Sidney, the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will hold a six-miler on Saturday, starting near the government wharf at 1 p.m.

After her came Bev Westman's Tiercel, Glenn Mitchell's Bottleneck, Bent Jespersen's Limfjord, Steve Meredith's Solution, Sandy McMillan's Ambergreen, Willi Jensen's Tiara III, Bill Martin's Georgia Girl, Alan Dickinson's Viking and Jack Patterson's Something.

Flukey winds plagued the sailors taking part in THSA's two around-the-buoy races on Sunday. Subject to protests yet to be heard, the top 10 boats in the first sailout were John Watson's Drambuie, Bob Craig's Ailsa Craig, Jan Olson's Discretion, Glen Higgins' Freeway, John Dewey's Shuttlecock, Andy McBride's Crazy Jane, Bob Van Den Driessche's Noosa, Gerry Porter's Sunshine, Dennis Davis' Freya and T. A. Krieger's Toluca.

In the second sailout, it was Discretion, followed by Ailsa Craig, Drambuie, Crazy Jane, Sunshine, Shuttlecock, Freeway, Walter Roots' Morning Calm and Randy Carter's Sungoold.

Sailerettes and cruising class boats of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will compete in an 11-miler on Sunday for the Gillard and Lou Seddon Trophies. Start time is 10 a.m.

Doug Bond's Gwahir won last Sunday's race for cruising boats, edging out Vic Wathier's Black Hawk and Fred Douglas' Virtue. In Sailerette co, petition it was Black Hawk, followed by Larry Restall's Golden Gull and Rod Newman's Silver Heron.

Two of the club's dinghy sailors distinguished themselves in Mainland racing last weekend, Tora Thyvold and Eric Murphy placing second in CYA 420 racing out of the Jericho Sailing Club.

Because of the women's nationals, RVYC Laser dinghy sailors will forego racing this weekend. Bob Britten won the first of two races sailed on Saturday, runner-up being Barry Wright and Ken Hellwig. Top sailors in the second race were Richard Dewey, Don Callow and Brian Robinson.

Consumer Help Office Opened

DELTA, B.C. (CP) — Susan Sims says she wants to spend her time advising people how to shop wisely before they make purchases they could later regret.

Ms. Sims runs the newly opened Deltassist Consumer Help Office in this municipality near Vancouver. Her job is funded by the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs and run in conjunction with Deltassist, a non-profit community resources society.

She says her office provides a grassroots approach to making information and consumer services available to people.

Ms. Sims' job helps consumers within the "disadvantaged community," including people on fixed income, who are often without cars and forced to shop at local grocery stores where prices may be 20 per cent higher than in supermarkets.

She said a group of them could possibly save money by taking a taxi home from a supermarket together.

"But so many people are afraid to get out and assert themselves to get the right buys," she said. "They are intimidated by these big companies."

When the price of the brand of coffee Ms. Sims enjoyed for years increased to $7.29 for three pounds, she decided it was not worth it.

"I quit drinking it and if enough people did, the people who import it would have to bring down the price."

"There are a lot of things which are not made well and cost too much. But as long as we are willing to pay the prices people will keep making them," Ms. Sims said.

One of the largest complaint areas is with cars and car repairs. Ms. Sims said a woman was told her car needed $200 worth of work. She intended to have it done but a chance inspection from a mechanic friend revealed that the work was unnecessary.

"Shop around and you could save yourself a lot of money," she said.

"Because you can't see the money coming out of your pocket it's often too late before you realize how much you owe."

Ms. Sims said most merchandise is brought back not because it is faulty but because it is not what the customer needs.

Turning coal fields into grasslands

Some people believe that when coal is mined by surface methods, only rock and rubble remain. The truth is that today's minesites must be reclaimed within a short period after mining activity is completed.

The Kaiser Resources operation near Sparwood is B.C.'s biggest coal mine, with a surface area of about five square miles. As mining proceeds, a program is being carried out to ensure that the site will be restored to a useful and attractive state. Reclamation has already been carried out on nearly two square miles of old mine workings—reclamation in which grass, trees and shrubs flourish over much of this area.

To accomplish this task, Kaiser Resources maintains two nurseries and a greenhouse. More than one million plants have been raised at the nurseries since 1969...and in the past five years, over 300,000 trees have been planted in reclaimed areas.

Before planting, the land must be contoured to conform with the surrounding terrain, then fertilized and furrowed. This effort, combined with research to determine the best plant species for various sites, has produced a high survival rate among seedlings. Moreover, wildlife authorities report that increasing numbers of elk and deer are foraging in reclaimed areas.

Mining activity at Sparwood makes a major contribution to the B.C. economy...providing direct employment for 2,000 people and helping to support thousands of others in service industries related to mining.

The mining industry is proving that with careful planning and continued effort, it's possible to enjoy the benefits of resource development while still retaining the beauty of British Columbia.

$89.1M ALLOCATED IN L.I.P. GRANTS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has allocated $89.1 million worth of grants under the 1976-1977 Local Initiatives Program (LIP), the manpower department announced Thursday.

The LIP program was started in 1971 to create jobs to offset seasonal unemployment basically through the winter months. Grants this year are expected to pay for more than 20,000 jobs, the department said in a statement.

Each federal constituency is guaranteed $75,000 and the remaining funds are distributed to constituencies with unemployment rates higher than seven per cent.

These are the total grants allocated to each province and the territories: Newfoundland, $7,718,000; Prince Edward Island $1,638,000; Nova Scotia $3,707,000; New Brunswick $7,701,000; Quebec $28,991,000; Ontario $16,305,000; Manitoba $1,784,000; Alberta $1,798,000; British Columbia $16,171,000; Northwest Territories $535,000 and the Yukon $303,000.

METRIC LIMIT on a highway between Calgary and Edmonton is designed to ease motorists into the metric system. Sign shows the new maximum speed limit will be 100 kilometres per hour next September.

Amtrak to Bargains

More than 500 Christmas bargain hunters are expected in Seattle next month aboard a special Amtrak train from Vancouver.

Vancouver travel agent Jack McClaren, organizer of the train expedition, says the disparity between prices in British Columbia and Seattle is so great that Canadians will save money even after paying for transportation, lodging and entertainment on the trip.

"Shopping in the U.S. has become one of the hottest items in Canada," says McClaren, who, by himself, sold more than $200,000 worth of Amtrak tickets last year to Canadians traveling to the United States. He estimated that each visitor would spend no less than $150 on shopping on each visit.

A suit selling for $160 in Seattle, he says, would retail for perhaps $300 in inflation-hit Vancouver, Canada.

For years, Canadians have crossed the border to shop in the northwest Washington towns of Blaine and Bellingham.

McClaren says a number of Seattle stores have tried to advertise in Canadian newspapers but have been turned down. He did not specify which newspapers refused the ads.

"I guess our papers didn't want to create a panic," he said. "It's a touchy subject but at the same time there is a heck of a spread in prices."

Eating Cows Too Long

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan assistant deputy agriculture minister Jim Webster urged cow-calf operators to think twice before selling their breeding herds, saying consumers are eating their way to a beef shortage.

"We've been eating cows and heifers too long. The breeding stock we need for future supply is being slaughtered and added to North America's bulging supply of beef," Webster said.

The situation is now so bad on this continent, consumers will pay dearly in the future for every cow turned into hamburger this winter, he said.

Webster said heifer slaughter is up 16 per cent and cow slaughter is up 21 per cent this year from 1975 which was a record year for cow and heifer slaughter.

Even more significant, he said, is the fact that American cow numbers are down seven per cent and the total United States cattle population has decreased five per cent.

"Cow and heifers which have so far escaped the hamburger grinder now are worth more producing calves than hamburger. Maintaining breeding stock is essential to meeting demands for beef," Webster said.

Producers are depressed and many are in the process of selling their herds because they have been suffering significant losses for the past three years. The losses are not going to continue forever, he said.

Death Education in High School?

In fact, said Dr. Balfour Mount during the Seventh World Conference on Family Medicine here Thursday, death education should probably start when sex education starts — in high school.

"We should make sure that death fits into our children's concept of life — we should tell them that life is a cycle."

Speaking during a press conference in connection with a presentation on palliative care to the physicians from 33 countries attending this week-long congress, Dr. Mount decried the fact "that we are such a death-denying society."

He said the Royal Victoria Hospital palliative care unit was started as an experiment two years ago and now has smoothed the final road to death for about 300 patients. The unit's work has been so successful, in fact, that the hospital decided earlier this week to convert the unit into a permanent program.

Seven per cent of all Canadians die in health institutions, Dr. Mount said, yet very little is done to make death in the hospital as easy as it's possible to make it.

"We've had very disturbing findings involving the isolation and the amount of psychological, emotional, spiritual and even medical needs that are not met in dying patients," Dr. Mount said.

"I can't see why society cannot support a number of palliative care units in general hospitals," he added.

One of the important aspects of care for the dying would have to be proper pain control, Dr. Mount said. "If you don't have that, the whole theory behind palliative care falls down because of the total, intractable pain many of these people, in cases of advanced malignancies for instance, suffer.

"This pain has incredibly important physical, psychological, interpersonal, spiritual and even financial components and they all have to be dealt with."

The surgeon rejected the often-expressed warning that extensive drugging, even of the dying patient, could produce drug addicts.

"The anxious, upset, tense and worried patient may actually feel pain more acutely," he said. "We simply must deal with that.

"There is little evidence that the fear of runing out of effective analgesics is justified or that there is a well-established trend of tolerance escalation to drugs.

"It wouldn't matter anyway. The patient is dying in any case."

He said medicine for the dying must be governed "by a definition of what is appropriate, not what is possible. Capacity to treat and prolong life doesn't always justify the action," he added.

ELDERLY TOO FAT

TORONTO (CP) — The idea of the pensioner existing solely on toast and tea or eating canned pet food is a misconception, Dr. Ronald Cape of London, Ont., told an international conference of family doctors Thursday.

The co-ordinator of the University of Western Ontario's geriatric medicine department says the main problem facing senior citizens is obesity.

"My advice about diets to an elderly patient is a little of what you fancy," he said. "Our nutritional sin is to eat far too much from the cradle to the grave."

Dr. Cape said elderly people who are worried about nutrition should try to have a mixed diet and at least one main meal a day with meat or fish.

The week-long international conference, which has drawn 1,500 family doctors from more than 30 countries, ended Thursday.

Let Dying Die, MDs Urged

TORONTO (FP) — The chief of medicine at McMaster University's St. Joseph's teaching hospital in Hamilton has made an impassioned plea to doctors from 23 countries to show mercy to the dying by letting them die.

Dr. W. M. Goldberg, who is also a clinical professor in his university's medical school, addressed the seventh Word Conference on Family Medicine Thursday. He spoke during a panel discussion on euthanasia, a classical Greek term which literally means easy death.

"I think we must let patients decide what they want," said Dr. Goldberg. "We must make health personnell listen to the patients. We can never directly kill or let persons kill themselves. We must, as health workers, not be burdened with a responsibility that is impossible to fulfill — that is, directly killing someone.

"But we can comfort to the point of no suffering and this is the skill of our art as doctors. The term 'skilful neglect' is an old, but honest one. We must define what we mean by life support."

Hormones Dangerous?

TORONTO (CP) — Family doctors should not use the male hormone testosterone to treat their middle-aged patients going through the so-called male menopause, an international conference of family doctors was told Thursday.

Dr. Peter Grantham, a Vancouver family doctor who also teaches family medicine part-time at the University of British Columbia, said researchers feel the male menopause is psychical, not hormonally based, and hormone treatment may be dangerous.

"Testosterone (treatment) raises concern because it is possible it will accelerate the growth of cancer of the prostate, cause fluid retention, priapism, involuntary painful erections and cholestatic jaundice," he said.

Independence Stressed For Elderly

A citizen study of health needs among the independent elderly in four B.C. communities, including Colwood-Langford, proposes government moves which would help such people stay independent longer.

Ranked first in priority is the need for more public transportation in suburban and rural areas, with a need for transportation services operated by volunteers, government and municipalities to be co-ordinated.

Also needed are more services which can be brought to homes of the elderly, including home nursing, domestic help, handyman and home repair assistance, and these should be more easily available to those with low or moderate incomes.

Innovative services such as meals-on-wheels, podiatry and hairdressing should be developed and expanded and voluntary visiting to elderly isolated people promoted.

The study was undertaken by the Social Planning and Review Council of B.C., a voluntary association of people across the province who are concerned with social and health issues.

Their six-month review focused on Langford-Colwood, Duncan and the Cowichan Valley, the Sechelt Peninsula and White Rock and through seminar discussions examined health services, transportation, accommodation, recreation and knowledge and use of services.

In Colwood and Langford, it found a general lack of co-ordination and information about services, including many cases little knowledge about services now being provided.

"A lack of planning by both voluntary and government bodies has led to the absence of a well-developed core of community services for the independent elderly," the report says of this area.

Some of the services which do exist from Victoria and don't meet the needs of people in Colwood and Langford. Poor communication among existing community groups is hampering development of services, as is a general confusion about responsibility for planning among different levels of government.

In its over-all recommendations for provincial government action, the SPARC report also suggests geriatric day care centres be developed to assist frail elderly people to remain in the community longer, that temporary care for some of them be available in hospitals or intermediate care facilities.

It calls for more financial help in the purchase of such things as glasses and hearing aids and in developing suitable low-cost housing.

In recommendations for joint action by volunteer groups and local governments, it suggests an efficient information service be developed along with a central emergency number such as 911.

"It is clear that institutionalization is often a necessary and final resource for the comfort and care of elderly citizens," the report says.

"However, SPARC believes that, given a carefully-planned spectrum of community services, early institutionalization can be avoided and the costs involved spread more evenly and humanely in services that will help seniors remain in their own homes and certainly in their own communities."

McPherson to Be Run by Arts Group

For Victoria's cost-conscious aldermen on Thursday it was an offer they couldn't refuse — the opportunity to wipe out a $25,000-a-year operating deficit by turning over the management of the city-owned McPherson Playhouse to a proposed arts foundation.

Any lingering doubts on the wisdom of such a move, which was first mooted a month ago, were apparently removed when the recreation committee heard a second persuasive sales pitch from Allan Purdy, former president of the Victoria Community Arts Council.

Purdy reiterated and enlarged on his earlier claim that the foundation of trust, with access to various grants, would be able to revamp the theatre's financial picture.

In its first year of operation under the new structure, he said, the present operating deficit would be completely removed and the capital expenditures deficit substantially reduced. The total gross deficit projected for 1976 is around $55,000.

"Really, you don't have much to lose and you have an awful lot to gain," Purdy commented.

In referring to potential sources of revenue, he said he had learned on "reasonable authority" that the B.C. Cultural Fund would favorably consider a grant toward such an arts centre, which would be "a very important step forward in the promotion and development of the arts in Victoria."

Increased services and activities aimed at senior citizens would open up the possibility of federal New Horizon grants, and another potential source of funding would be the Canada Council.

Purdy said he has sounded out several major business concerns in the city, and they enthusiastically support the idea of providing equipment and services to the theatre in return for tax credits.

Among his general proposals for reorganization, including the use of foyers for meetings and displays, he suggested the formation of a McPherson Arts Centre club.

This organization, Purdy said, would "offer a variety of opportunities for regular theatre-goers and those involved in other forms of artistic activity to be involved . . . to a greater degree than at present."

The committee, obviously won over, recommended that council approve in principle the establishment of a foundation to operate the McPherson.

One of the first steps will be to entrust a steering committee with the task of drawing up a constitution for the new body, and also drafting an agreement between it and the city governing the theatre's operation.

Oak Bay's McLelland Resigning as Alderman

Oak Bay Alderman Doug McLelland Thursday handed in his resignation to be effective Dec. 31 — the half-way point of his two-year term.

His departure creates an extra vacancy for municipal elections in November. Council has set Oct. 25 as nomination day for the byelection.

McLelland said he is leaving council for personal reasons and because his work requires him to be absent from the city two days a week, leaving little time for other responsibilities.

Mayor Brian Smith said McLelland has been "a good, independent, forthright" member of council, and other aldermen expressed regret over his decision to step down.

Smith, who received McLelland's letter of resignation a few days ago, said he tried to dissuade McLelland from quitting before turning the resignation over to the municipal clerk to give it effect.

The alderman had a reputation for dissent and innovation, including outspoken support for a bylaw that would have made dog owners responsible for pet droppings on other properties.

His proposed law failed to go through, although some aldermen expressed sympathy for the underlying idea.

At Council Thursday notice was received from Oak Bay Firefighters Association announcing a decision to work on labor's national day of protest Thursday.

Firemen said they support the principle of protest against the policies of the policies of the Anti-Inflation Board, but will perform all regular duties that day.

The association will not interfere with firemen who join protest activities on their own time, council was told.

Finance committee will reexamine a request from Greater Victoria Information Centre for a grant this year.

Council rejected a previous request for funds, which under a municipal sharing formula would amount to about $2,300.

Children's Centre May Close

Government restrictions and increased taxes may force the closure of the Jack Horner child activity centre in Saanich after 13 years.

Owner-manager Jeanette Hawes has asked the council's finance committee to reduce her property taxes in order to avoid closure.

But Mayor Ed Lum suggested council support Hawes' appeal to the provincial government for financial help instead.

Hawes told the committee the centre, unlike any normal business, cannot hike fees in order to meet the cost of rising taxation.

The provincial government, she said, sets the rates for day care, the number of employees that must be hired and the minimum wages that must be paid.

40-CHANNEL CB HERE JANUARY

New citizen's band broadcasting sets with wider transmitting capacity will be available early in January.

A city retailer said Thursday, 1977 models will incorporate 40-channel capacity which becomes effective in Canada April 1.

At present the citizen's band is limited to 23 channels, which are becoming overloaded with mushrooming popularity of the compact, low-cost mobile version of the two-way radio.

Those owning 23-channel equipment may elect to stay with it if they are satisfied with a narrower choice of broadcast-receive channels. But local dealers say they don't know of any way to convert such sets to 40 channels and if the wider band is desired, owners will have to wait for the new sets.

Credit Laws: Time for a Change

caveat emptor

By LYNNE GORDON

How should we give women equal access to credit?

That has been a question facing Canadian provinces, and a few — British Columbia, Ontario, Alberta and Saskatchewan — have decided to take the route of voluntary guidelines.

These provinces have decided to attempt to work with the financial community and institute voluntary guidelines in order to avoid the tricky necessity to legislate equality.

But let's face it, if any guidelines or laws are to be effective, women are going to have to know about them and demand their rights. Equally important, credit grantors will have to face the fact that different rules have existed for men and women in the credit world and that it's time for a change.

The treatment of women has varied according to marital status: married, unmarried, widowed, separated or divorced. Common law wives have no legal rights at all, as yet.

The guidelines seek to change the archaic way of judging credit on the woman's relationship to man. Therefore, the guidelines state that a married woman should be granted credit in her own name if her credit qualifications, including her earnings or separate property, are equal that of a man eligible for credit.

Similarly, an unmarried woman shall be granted credit if her credit qualification, property and earnings are equal to that of a man receiving credit.

An important breakthrough for divorced and separated women is that alimony and child support can and should be considered as a source of income. In refusing to accept this as income in the past, credit grantors have implied that all men are villians and cannot be trusted to pay support.

Family planning should not have any bearing on a woman's credit worthiness. Whether she plans to have children, when and how many, is a woman's business. Under the guidelines, credit grantors have no right to ask.

Also important is the rule that a change in marital status shall not be the sole consideration in requiring reapplication for previously issued credit cards or the renegotiation of existing credit arrangments. More women have been shocked to be denied credit after they've been widowed or divorced.

One woman told me: "I was responsible for buying our house, car, appliances and for planning our trips. And now I have to prove myself all over again, in spite of the fact that I make more money than my husband."

My views vary somewhat from the traditional advice on how to establish credit.

People are encouraged to take out loans and to apply for credit cards. Consider these options carefully, making sure that you don't simply get hooked into the old credit game. Easy credit is a temptation to impulse buy and that can lead to serious credit problems later.

Remember that you're trying to establish credit worthiness for a time when you really need it. Depending on how you play the game, you can end up with either a good or a bad credit rating.

A woman who doesn't work outside the home and may not have a separate income of her own should attempt to do a few things to establish some credit in her own name. She should open her own personal savings-chequing account — not just have a joint account with her usband. Once she has that account, even with a small amount of money in it, she should use it to pay some bills on a regular basis.

If it's too much for a husband to cope with the idea of giving a wife money for an account he has no access to, start planning it nice and easy. Put away some of the housekeeping money or your allowance in a personal account. Then use it for making certain specific payments on a regular basis. Even a small account can establish your regularity and reliability.

No matter how well a wife manages a family's accounts, so long as the account is in the husband's name or a joint account, she receives no "credit" for her abilities to manage money. Her husband gets the credit even if he turns all the money over to her and she does all the balancing of the books and paying the bills.

It's wise for both a husband and a wife to have a personal bank account if for no other reason than to avoid problems should one spouse suddenly die. A joint account can be frozen or a bank manager can, at his discretion, limit the amount the surviving spouse can withdraw.

At a time of death, that's one hassle nobody needs.

If you've been given the family budget to handle and you blow it, don't relinquish the reins in too much of a hurry. Everyone gets tangled up once in a while and there may be a perfectly legitimate reason. There are emergencies, unexpected expenditures and price increases.

When you make a mistake, it may be the time for an eager husband to move in and take over. Watch it. Have the facts and reasons at hand and be ready to present them.

The biggest battle for women is probably in the home but it is at least time for the financial community to drop the different prejudices toward the sexes. Many bank managers still hesitate to loan money to women without a husband's co-signature, even when the woman's credit is as good as her husbands.

Fight that, because the argument that if a husband doesn't approve or agree, the loan will cause friction in the marriage. That's your business and it's time bankers stayed out of the bedrooms of the nation.

He's Geritol Set's LaLanne

SEATTLE (AP) — Nurses at the old folks' home have dubbed him the Jack LaLanne of the Geritol set. But "Uncle Sam" Grossman, over 75, doesn't mind.

Teaching his weekly exercise class for the 70- to 99-year-old residents at the Caroline Klines Galland Home for the Aged "keeps me young," he says.

"Watching people enjoy themselves makes me feel like a better human being," he adds as he prepares to launch his fun-and-games regimen for the senior set.

"Come on," said one of Grossman's class members, a bespectacled 88-year-old gentleman. "Let's get swinging."

Uncle Sam looks around the packed hall with a grin, gives his pants a tug, and announces the first exercise.

"Is everybody happy? We're gonna warm up by clapping. One-two-three, get those hands up. Four-five . . ."

"One, two, three," echo the residents, some clapping, some nodding their heads in time. One man raps the tray of his wheelchair in time while another follows the action with his eyes.

"Say hah," commands the leader.

"Hah," the residents echo.

"Hahh, hah," continues Grossman.

"Hup, hup, hup," wheezes a wheelchaired woman.

A white-haired woman hurries in. "Have I missed anything?" she asks anxiously. "I was having my hair done. Did I miss a joke?"

"A joke?" Grossman leaps at the cue. "Why I'd love to tell a joke.

"You see there was this drunk who had to come before the judge in court. And the judge said to him: 'Wel Mr. Smith, I see they've brought you in for drinking.'

"So the drunk said: 'Yes, sir, bring out the booze and let's start drinking.'"

The joke is appreciated.

"Did you hear, Sadie," whispers one woman poking the lady in the next chair. "The drunk wants to start the judge drinking schnapps."

RESEARCHED FISH STORY

SEATTLE (AP) — Things were pretty slow on the law and order circuit in Seattle recently.

So slow, in fact, that Seattle Police spokesman Dick Goodman had time to research this bit of legal wisdom:

"It is unlawful to carry a goldfish on Seattle public transportation unless that goldfish is lying down."

The Formula

Crystallography is one of the most interesting facets of science. From the crystals found in caves that probably took thousands of years "to grow," to the crystals found in rock candy that can be produced in a matter of a few minutes, they have one thing in common: the atoms and molecules are always arranged in a regular three-dimensional pattern. Conversely, a solid that has no crystalline structure is called amorphous.

A good example of this is in the petrolatum waxes. Paraffin has a definite crystalline structure while amorphous wax has none. But combined they form a useful product for many applications.

Unlike our other formulas, this one does not result in a product. However, the fun of seeing crystals grow, and the decorative effect, seems to me to justify its inclusion.

You'll need a porous brick, a shallow pan or bowl, 12 tablespoons salt, 12 tablespoons water, 12 tablespoons of laundry bluing, two tablespoons of household ammonia, and eight drops of red, blue or green ink. Mix the salt, water, laundry bluing and household ammonia in a suitable container. Place brick in pan or bowl and fill with solution to two inches on side of brick. Add your choice of colored ink in spots on the top surface of brick. Capillary action will cause solution to migrate to top surface where colored crystals will grow.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

Lord Charles: A new sartorial image

A Titled Haberdasher Doesn't Bat a Brow

New York Times

NEW YORK — A Churchill in trade? Why not, says Lord Charles George William Colin Spencer-Churchill, the younger brother of the Duke of Marlborough, owner of Blenheim where cousin Winston Churchill was born.

"Churchills have been in every sort of business," says Lord Charles Churchill ("please call me Charles"), who does not think the British will raise an eyebrow at the idea of one if its illustrious names selling clothing.

So far, he hasn't actually sold a suit, except for being photographed at Blenheim wearing off-the-peg clothes manufactured here by Augustus, a new offshoot of Tarra Hall Clothiers. The photographs will be used for a "Nobility in Fashion" advertising campaign and the company hopes to lure other European titles on front of the cameras.

Dick Kallman, the former actor who is executive vice-president of Augustus ("we liked the regal sound of it"), also has plans to have Lord Charles travel around the United States making appearances in stores and giving television interviews. Kallman invited 150 guests to his East Side apartment to meet Lord Charles.

Lord Charles, 36, who is 6 feet 6 inches tall, has the blue-eyed boyish face all Churchills seem to inherit and would love to make store visits. For one thing, he is enthusiastic about the United States. He spent three years at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, which one of his ancestors, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, helped found. (Consuelo, the ninth Duchess of Marlborough, was the Commodore's great granddaughter.)

"It was fun," Lord Charles said of his years in the U.S. "The most enlightening years of my life." He worked for a while for an insurance company in Nashville and married Gillian Fuller, an American, from whom he is divorced.

However, Lord Charles is not sure how much time he can give to travelling around this country. He is a stockbroker — "for my sins" — in London, and has a wife and five-year-old son.

"I'm a second son, you know," he said. "I have to work." Even his brother the Duke is in a form of trade: He charges admission for tourists to view the great white elephant that is Blenheim.

Meanwhile, Lord Charles and his friend, Lord Hugh Hartford, are happy to lend their names and faces to the Augustus campaign. They are being paid — jointly by Augustus and the Wool Bureau — for their images, although they're not saying how much.

THEY ADD PARTY PEP

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Farrell's job is a laughing matter. So is Billie Waters'. And Vera McGaughey's.

If your party lacks that special something, they'll enliven it — for a fee.

Farrell's operation is by far the largest and perhaps the most exotic. For $75, he promises to spruce up a drooping party with a contentious couple, a clumsy maid, a tipsy butler, a guest who falls asleep — maybe even a nude bartender. And for $300 or $400 you can get a minicelebrity to come to your party.

"I would attend parties and find there was some ingredient missing," Farrell said. "So I invented characters who would infiltrate the party."

The result was Jack Farrell's Party People, a loose organization of about 40 persons.

"Most of my people have been in the theatre. It's a way for actors and actresses to make a little extra money," Farrell says.

Farrell, of North Hollywood and himself a television actor, began the service 10 years ago in New York and started it on the West Coast when he came here three years ago.

"I've become recognized by too many people," he said. "So I seldom go to parties unless I'm going as myself."

One of those who goes in his place is Billie Waters of Seal Beach, who has a habit of laughing at the wrong times.

"I go to the parties to play a clumsy maid who has this laughing problem," she explains. "Instead of being apologetic, every time I drop something I laugh."

Do professional part people ever throw their own parties?

"Almost never," says Farrell. "They're too boring."

Wife's Frustrated But He's Unaware

DEAR ABBY: A note to the lady who was considering divorce because she was tired of "faking in the bedroom" for eight years.

I've been married for 30 years to a dear man who (I hope) is not aware that his love-making is far from satisfying. But I would "fake it" for another 90 years rather than hurt this beautiful man who cannot, or will not, discuss our sex life. He would be devastated at the thought of how unfulfilled and frustrated he has left me. And he would be crushd by the idea that I thought he needed counseling.

After all this time I'm sure part of the fault was mine.—NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Therapists in the human sexuality program of many medical schools inform me that many couples who have been married for more than 30 years have been helped tremendously by counselling. But if you know that your husband is not a candidate for counselling, and you are willing to "fake it" forever, you have handled your problem well enough to suit yourself.

I would not, however, advise anyone who has been married for only eight years to "fake it." In these enlightened times, a spouse commits a grave error in judgment to "fake satisfaction when real satisfaction can be achieved through education.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I received a chain letter in the mail. With it were strict instructions to make six copies and send it to six of my friends, or "something" will happen to me.

What can happen if I don't?—WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: You will save 78 cents and a lot of time.

DEAR ABBY: This is for EMBARRASSED. She said her three grown children were raised in a good Christian home, but one plays with a rock group and looks like a bum, another lives with a married man in Mexico, and another is into a far-out religious cult that doesn't believe in money (although she's always asking her parents for some to feed her and her "brothers and sisters." (The problem was what to tell people when friends ask what her kids are doing.

What a coincidence! We have three grown children who turned out very much like EMBARRASSED'S, but we aren't embarrassed. When people ask about them, we give them a complete rundown, and the usual response is: "That's nothing. Wait till I tell you what MY kids are doing!"—SOUTH

DEAR ABBY: A reader asked why he should tip a waiter when the chef cooked the excellent meal. Having been in the restaurant business for nearly 50 years, I think I can answer that question.

The chef (or cook) draws the highest salary in the place, and most chefs get "tipped" from the waiters and waitresses "in appreciation" for getting their orders out quickly.

You could call it "blackmail" for want of a better name, but that's the way it's done in the better restaurants. And there is no use going to the boss because a good chef is hard to find, but waiters can be had by the dozens.

Talk about your prima donna! Artists could learn a lot about temperament from these kings of the kitchen!—J. OUT EAST

The Breakdown on Compost Problems

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

Flies, stray pets and rats are attracted to compost piles like mosquitoes to murky water — especially when the rotting heap in question contains raw garbage. Fortunately, the Feigers never had a rat problem, but they used to be troubled by all other kinds of pests whenever they put kitchen wastes on their compost pile.

The heap itself consisted mainly of dried vegetation and aged manure that had been run through their shredder-grainder to speed decomposition. And these wastes — alone — didn't draw many pests. Any time they put fresh garbage on the mound, however, they soon saw their backyard invaded by cats, dogs, and flies and the vastly increased "earthy" smell wrinkled their neighbors' noses.

At first, they attempted to remedy the situation by putting a fence around the compost pile. This discouraged a few of the smaller dogs in the neighborhood, but it did nothing to eliminate the other pests (let alone the pungent odor).

They also tried burying the garbage in the pile, a technique that took care of the flies, cats, and wrinkled noses (and all but the hungriest hounds). Judy Feiger wasn't fond of having to dig into the compost every time she wanted to dump the garbage, though, and the fence they'd erected earlier didn't make her shovelling any easier.

And then they visited her husband's Uncle Byron (who happens to be an avid organic gardener). Uncle Byron showed them how he turned garbage into fertilizer without attracting vermin: He simply loaded his refuse into either of two bottomless galvanized-steel trash cans which he'd buried upright in the ground. Only the tops of the cans were visible.

"All I have to do is put my garbage in one trash can until it begins to fill up," Uncle Byron explained, "which usually takes a few months. Then I start putting garbage in the second barrel. By the time that container's full, the material in the first can has been converted to compost and is ready to be used in the garden."

Uncle Byron showed them the contents of the two buried trash receptacles. One was filled with what looked and smelled like fresh household garbage, while the other contained beautiful, rich, humus-like material. Not far away was a compost pile which contained "digested refuse" from the second can. It was completely pest-and-odor-free.

Needless to say, when the Feigers got home they were anxious to try Uncle Byron's "double-barrel" approach to composting. First Judy rounded up a pair of trash cans and made an opening in the bottom of each. The best way to do this is to have a welder cut the entire bottom out with a torch. Alternatively, several large punctures will suffice for drainage purposes.

Then she buried the two barrels in the ground, leaving just enough of their rims showing so that she could fit snug lids on them. And without further ado she began to empty her kitchen garbage into one of the two steel compost "pits."

The virtues of the new system were immediately apparent. Cats, dogs, and flies were shut out while odors were shut in. Maggots did appear once, after they put fish innards in the can, but the heat generated by natural biodegradation killed off the little varmints before they could develop into adult flies.

Various "trash can" insecticides exist, but Judy said she can see nothing to recommend them. And besides, even though maggots are repulsive she said she didn't mind them spending their short lives working the soil in her subterranean composter.

It seemed like forever (actually, it was four months) before that first small can was completely full. The container might be brimming with garbage one day and it might be down to a third of that amount a few days later. In hot weather, the wastes seemed to melt like ice.

When the barrel was nearly filled to capacity and stayed there, Judy mixed in a shovelful of manure to help speed decomposition. Then she closed the lid tight and let nature take its course.

In the meantime, she started dumping garbage into the second can. And sure enough, long before it was full, the first container's contents had turned into rich, black compost, ready to be spread on the garden or used to top-dress their flowering plants.

A bonus they hadn't counted on, by the way, was earthworms. The little squirmers were attracted to the barrels in droves and, after coming in through the openings in the cans' bottoms, kept themselves busy working the rotted garbage into a black, meal-like fertilizer (which proved, once again, that worms are every bit as much a blessing to gardeners as to fishermen).

The Feigers are happy to report — thanks to their "underground composter" — that they no longer have any problem with pests, their neighbors never look at them with wrinkled noses and they now have a garbage disposal that will never choke on a bone or add a cent to their utility bill.

WILLING WIDOW

BREMEN, West Germany (CP) — Widow Caroline Beckers couldn't resist anyone who did her a good turn. She changed her will again and again, promising her money to whoever was the kindest to her.

After promising bequests to everyone from gardeners to nieces, Frau Becker finally died, leaving her life savings and house to the postman.

Decomposing in Closet

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I've read how important compost is for my garden. Can you furnish some information on "how to"? This is my first garden and I want to do it right?—T.P.

Dear T. P.: Right now is when you can begin to build your compost — the most essential ingredient for a strong, healthy garden. Save your garbage (food and newspapers) in a large extra-heavy plastic trash bag (tightly sealed). Do not include anything that does not "break down," such as tin cans, glass, plastic and so forth. We keep our compost bags in the garbage, but as long as you reseal them tightly they can be kept anywhere, such as back hall, laundry room or broom closet. The longer the garbage decomposes, the better it will be for your garden.

Come spring, as early as possible, dig a deep hole in the garden area and bury the garbage. Apply a layer of manure, then a layer of soil. Allow to sit for a few weeks, turning frequently.

Water profusely during this period. Plant your crops when compost is thoroughly worked into the soil. And look forward to gorgeous vegetables. We really enjoy composting, everything is recycled as Mother Nature intended it to be and there is no such thing as leftovers. What we don't eat, the plants will. We saved too much and ended up giving away compost. Gift-wrapped, of course.

Germs Can Develop Defence Patterns

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Is it true that some germs have learned to defend themselves against antibiotics? — Miss M.O.

DEAR MISS O.:

It is true that some germs that have been bombarded with antibiotics have changed their "living patterns" in order to survive. Bacteria constantly treated with certain antibiotics have taken on characteristics that make them hardier and therefore more resistant to some antibiotics.

Consequently, pharmaceutical manufacturers, under the guidance of chemists and scientists, are constantly seeking new antibiotics to combat the "resistant" strains of bacteria.

I am in my early 50s and have been married for 35 years. I recently found that a tube-like structure protrudes from my vagina. I am afraid to consult my doctor for fear that it may be cancerous. Can you tell me if this is serious? — Mrs. R.S.

DEAR Mrs. S.:

Many women, especially those who have been married for a long time and have had children, may develop what is known as a prolapse of the vagina. In essence, this means that the muscles and the ligaments that support the vagina, the bladder, the uterus, and the wall of the rectum may have lost their elasticity and strength. The result is that there is a falling down of these tissues.

In most instances, surgery can completely cure the problem and relieve the discomfort associated with it.

At the present time, your greatest problem is not your physical condition, but rather the emotional implications that are terrifying you.

In essence, you are consulting a doctor when you write to me. I am glad to furnish some kind of assurance to you. My greatest contribution, however, will be to encourage you to see your own doctor. He knows you best and he is in an ideal position to relieve your anxiety and begin a constructive program that will lead to your physical and emotional recovery.

Toys Tied to TV

DALLAS (AP) — As this season's television programs skyrocket to popularity or plunge to oblivion, so will the hopes of toy manufacturers.

Toys of every description tied to network television programs crowded shelves at this week's toy show at the Dallas Market Centre.

There were Fonzie coloring books, Starsky and Hutch pistols, Kojak cars and Bionic Woman secret code puzzles.

"Toy companies are capitalizing on television exposure to sell their products," said Dick McGrail of H-G Toys, Inc., of Long Beach, N.Y. His products included puzzles, bulletin boards, poster kits and police items based on seven current TV shows.

But McGrail is quick to point out that firms can easily lose money on a program that bombs.

"We've been lucky because we have a man in Los Angeles who does nothing but keep tabs on new and proposed shows," McGrail said.

Gene Churchill, president of the Southwest Toy and Hobby Association, says that "just to set up production and make the mold for a simple plastic model can easily cost over $100,000."

He admits he has had some losers but the "successes have been terrific. We have a plastic model of Fonzie and his motorcycle which we have sold out through next February."

Carolyn Weaver, a representative for Parker Brothers, a leading maker of games, says her company shied away from games based on television programs until last year.

"Last year we created the Six-Million-Dollar Man game and did no advertising," she said. "It was our seventh best-selling game."

Parker's current line has five games tied to TV shows.

Toy manufacturers buy rights from the programs' producers, allowing them to market an item based on the show's name and its stars.

Jeff Lewis, southwest representative of L. J. N. Toys, Ltd., of New York City, said many companies are buying licences with money that once went into TV advertising.

"It's a whole new way of using the TV medium," Lewis said. "The show itself becomes your advertising."

MYOPIC POOCH? TRY EYEGLASSES

PARIS (AP) — First it was sweaters, then booties, now it's eyeglasses for dogs.

Paris eyeglass manufacturer Robert Morel said the glasses can be used for anything from nearsightedness to protecting Fido's eyes from the sun.

He said examination is done with something called "luminous rays" and that the glasses can be purchased from almost any optician.

A photograph showed the dog glasses bore a close resemblance to human glasses, except they have a plastic chin strap to help keep them in place.

Check Oven Racks

Before you preheat the oven make sure the oven racks are in the proper place. For example, for yeast-bread loaves and pies you may want to place the rack below the centre of the oven.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Without any doubt, it is an advantage for one to know all the complicated plays in bridge, such as the double squeeze, the trump coup, etc. But in the primary attribute of any winning bridge player in the proper application of judgment, the latter based on the senses of sight and hearing (that is, observation, and the listening in to the bidding of the opponents).

In today's deal we have an example of a defender's sense of sight bringing about declarer's downfall. While one cannot refer to the defender's play as either scintillating or magnificent, I believe that many defenders, had they been occupying the West seat, might have adopted a different line of defense that would have given declarer the victory.

	NORTH ♠ K 2 ♡ Q 9 6 4 3 ◇ 8 5 3 ♣ Q 10 7
WEST ♠ 10 7 4 ♡ 5 ◇ K Q J 9 ♣ A K 8 6 4		EAST ♠ 9 8 6 5 3 ♡ 8 7 ◇ 10 7 4 2 ♣ 3 2
	SOUTH ♠ A Q J ♡ A K J 10 2 ◇ A 6 ♣ J 9 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

On West's opening lead of the club king, the seven was played from dummy, East followed with the three-spot, and South falsecarded by dropping the nine. At this point, an unobservant West might well have led the diamond king in order to create a couple of diamond winners. Had West done this, South would have breezed in with his contract, losing just two clubs and a diamond.

But West did not make the mistake of switching to diamonds at trick two. He didn't do so for a very obvious reason: he had noted the "unappearance" of the deuce of clubs on the opening lead. So, before playing to trick two, he paused for reflection.

As he viewed the set-up, either declarer had the deuce (and had deliberately falsecarded with the nine), or East had the deuce and was initiating a high-low signal with the doubleton 3-2 (surely, if East had the J-3-2, he would not have played the three-spot).

So, at trick two, West led the club ace, East dropping the deuce. South continued his deception by playing the jack. But West now knew that South possessed the five-spot (East would not have played the three, at trick one, from an original holding of 5-3-2). A third club lead was then made, East ruffing. In time, the defenders made a diamond trick, and declarer was down one.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Joan opened the window wide and peered down the road. "Dad did say he'd drop in this afternoon," she declared. "What's the time now?"

"In a few seconds the minute hand will be right on a minute mark, exactly seven minutes ahead of the hour hand," replied Jeff, checking his watch. "He'll be here any moment."

What would that time be?

'No Thanks' to Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP) — "I told him he could keep his problems. We don't want them."

That was Mayor Duncan Anderson's response to a suggestion by Bert Wellman, Saskatoon's director of planning and development, that Delisle become a satellite of Saskatoon.

Saskatoon faces the necessity of spending millions of dollars if it expands beyond a population of about 200,000, a figure which may be reached in 10 years or less.

City planners have suggested a better alternative to continuing sprawl is to establish satellite suburbs of 50,000 people which would be self-sufficient but still a part of the political entity of Saskatoon. The thought was that some existing towns outside the city might be starting points for the satellite concept.

Mayor Anderson said Delisle intends to shut down when its population reaches 2,000.

"We just won't open up any more lots. We see the problem Saskatoon has. There's just no way we want that sort of thing."

In Asquith, Mayor Malcolm Summach said:

"We don't want to grow too much. Under 1,000 would be just nice. Why should we get all the problems?"

In the village of Dundurn, the population is expected to go to 500 from 375 this year. "We're hoping to keep it there," said Mrs. N. T. Brown, secretary-treasurer.

But Mrs. Brown expects pressures will build on Dundurn "and I don't doubt we'll have to be a satellite to Saskatoon some day."

"No one is interested in any huge development out here," said M. T. Elash, secretary-treasurer in Clavet, a community east of Saskatoon.

In Aberdeen, to the northeast, secretary-treasurer J. A. Dice said:

"If we get bigger we'd need to raise taxes and expand services. If you start to grow you never know where it'll end."

What happens to a satellite city concept if the communities around Saskatoon are determined to resist growth? The suggestion is that Saskatoon set up its own satellite community.

But Mr. Wellman said one of the consequences of doing that would be the almost certain death of some of the existing communities and, at least, a halt to any further growth in them.

In Dalmeny, 12 miles sorth of Saskatoon, Mayor J. J. Loewen said the community has no intention of being a satellite, either by being absorbed by Saskatoon or by growing into a large bedroom community.

"People come here because they want a small town to live in. We don't want to get big.

"There's no use saying we won't develop. We can't stick our heads in the sand, but we're not going to sell out our community."

Warman mayor Robert Neufeld said:

"We don't want the town to grow. We've got too many there now. It was nice and peaceful before but now there are all those people. We're about 1,200 now.

"I don't think any town could stand the change that would take place if it grew to 50,000 people. Existing residents would be uprooted. Their way of life would be changed too much."

Brew Industry 'Pure Biology'

EDINBURGH (CP) — A woman who has trained dozens of overseas students in the science and art of brewing beer says the brewery industry is the only industry in the world based on pure biological principles.

Prof. Anna MacLeod of Heriot-Watt University in Edinburgh said she finds it a pleasant industry.

"There is no resentment at the intrusion of a woman. There is a certain freemasonry among everybody connected with brewing all over the world.

"Perhaps this is because brewers are producing a pleasant product, so the industry tends to attract people with a friendly nature. While the industry is getting more scientific, it still retains its bonhomie."

Teaching students to cope with today's sophisticated and scientific brewing industry is Prof. MacLeod's job. "Brewers must produce beer of consistent quality and flavor," she said, "so it is essential to understand the biology and biochemistry of the process."

The students study microbiology, biochemistry, malting and brewing and there is some chemical engineering so that they can understand modern plant equipment.

"The idea that beer was better when grandfather was a boy is a myth and brewers want their staff to be specially trained scientists," she said.

Prof. MacLeod, who is from Inverness in the Scottish highlands, was appointed to a professorship last year and controls the only course of its kind in Britain.

She was chairman of the Scottish section of the Institute of Brewing and was the institute's first woman president in 1970.

She "drifted" into brewing through her interest in plant physiology and biochemistry, particularly the metabolism of cereals and germination of barley.

"One of the glories of beer is that it is essentially a natural product. It is nonsense to say it's all chemical. Yeast and barley are still the basics in nearly all beers."

The path that led the daughter of an Inverness clergyman to a professorship in brewing started in 1939 when she graduated in botany from Edinburgh University.

"The last thing I wanted to be was a teacher," she said. "I studied botany because it was less rigid than most subjects and seemed to have more potential."

But for six years she taught in an Edinburgh school until in 1945 she became a biology lecturer at Heriot-Watt.

Through the institute of brewing, whose journal she has edited for 11 years she has worked with brewers at home and overseas.

Prof. MacLeod's enthusiasm for beer is not purely objective. She describes herself as a casual beer-drinker and enjoys a small lager after a round of golf.

Almost all her students join the brewing industry after graduation although she says they would be equally well qualified to work in other fields such as the dairy or sugar industries.

It's Time for Winter Planters

With the season moving along towards Thanksgiving, the outdoor planters and tubs may be cleared of summer annuals and replanted with something special for winter. This applies to balcony tubs as well as those on patios, sundecks and at ground level.

Two suggestions suited to most situations are winter-blooming heathers, and wallflowers with a few bulbs that will flower during winter before the wallflowers. Only the most severe winter weather will prevent these plants from providing the pleasure anticipated.

The winter heathers are flat in growth habit and thus not subject to damage by wind. Also, a tub is easily covered with an opened-out cardboard carton tied on with cord if protection should be thought necessary.

Foliage of winter bloomers is dark green and buds are even now to be seen, making the plants interesting from the day they are put in.

Since there are many varieties to choose from, see them at a nursery or garden centre having a good selection. White, pale pink, deep pink and a reddish pink are among the shades.

While several plants of one variety will undoubtedly give a better effect by all flowering during the same period, different varieties prolong the time of interest by overlapping in succession.

Each gardener will decide according to the effect desired.

Tubs and planters of well-grown wallflowers are not only attractive during winter as they develop and make buds but are the essence of spring when the rich heady perfume fills the air for weeks from late March.

By adding a few bulbs to flower in winter before the wallflowers take over the space completely, a longer season of bloom is gained.

Choose the kind of bulb according to preference. Bright blue Chionodoxa luciliae (Glory-of-the-Snow) is much liked for its habit of blooming regardless of weather.

If not already acquainted with early blooming narcissus and tulip species, a half-dozen of each might start a new hobby. Planted in a tub to themselves where winter sun will reach but shelter from open northeast wind is provided, these small treasures are likely to become favorites.

Even though wallflowers alone are chosen, there are several colors to choose from. Here it is better to choose all one color or the effect will be spotty. Clear rich yellow gold or dark bronzy-brown seem to be the favorites. The perfume is without equal from such unassuming plants. These are biennials to plant now. They bloom in early spring, then are discarded.

Don't let the chance go by without filling tubs and planters during this long weekend. Bonus dividends are realized when contemplating them during what we call bad-weather spells which will come during late fall.

GOV'T WORKERS WANT FORD OUT

WASHINGTON (WP) — The head of a coalition of most federal and postal worker unions said Thursday that leaders of the groups, which represent more than 1.5 million civil servants, will "do every damn thing we can to see that Ford's not in the White House in January."

Kenneth Blaylock, new president of the American Federation of Government Employees, made the statement at a news conference called to outlined a co-ordinated "legal, non-partisan" political drive planned by more than a dozen AFL-CIO and independent unions of government workers.

Blaylock said the unions had agreed to use their various political funds — independent of dues money from members — to work for the election of Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter. In addition, he said, unions would sponsor "truth squads" made up of union aides and federal workers who will follow President Ford on the campaign trail, to keep him honest.

Ford Tries to Cover Polish Gaffe

LOS ANGELES (WP) — Without ever publicly acknowledging that he had stumbled in his debate with Jimmy Carter, President Ford Thursday tried to dismiss a potentially embarrassing issue by declaring that the United States "has never conceded and never will concede" the domination of Eastern Europe by the Soviet Union.

That was not what the President said Wednesday night in his debate with Jimmy Carter in San Francisco, where he declared to a puzzled audience: "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe . . ."

As Ford corrected himself Thursday in the bright sunshine of the University of Southern California campus, a voice floated out from his student audience, saying, "Make up your mind, Jerry."

The comment, which produced a brief burst of laughter, probably was the low point in a day in which Ford tried to bounce back from his second debate with Carter with a hard-line attack on the Democratic nominee's defence policies.

Ford and his aides repeatedly expressed the view that the president had, in fact, won this debate with Carter or had at least finished in a tie with him. Stuart Spencer, political director of the Ford campaign, said that polls taken for the president showed Carter with only a 2 per cent victory margin and added that a majority of those polled said that Ford had greater "believability" than his opponent.

But Carter abandoned his normal caution and employed some of his harshest campaign rhetoric in press conferences, speeches and formal statements.

He told a group of labor leader in San Francisco the Ford comment was "ridiculous," and later characterized it in an interview as "a very serious mistake . . . that will be more and more damaging to him."

"This claim of freedom is a cruel hoax upon millions of Eastern Europeans who have lived under Soviet domination for their entire lives," Carter said.

$5 Pocket Money Enough for Ford

WASHINGTON (WP) — Gerald Ford and his wife apparently managed to live on between $5 and $13 per week in pocket money during 1972, according to an Internal Revenue Service audit conducted during Ford's vice presidential confirmation proceedings.

According to a secret IRS summary of the audit, Ford explained to revenue agents that he required very little cash, because most of his miscellaneous expenses were paid by private interest groups to whom he made speeches and by other political associates.

After talking with Ford and examining his records, IRS agents concluded that he and his wife spent only between $225 and $637 in cash during the entire year, the summary shows.

That amount, the agents wrote in their report, "surprised" even Ford when he was made aware of the calculation. Nonetheless, the agents accepted the figures as plausible totals for "miscellaneous, out-of-pocket" cash expenditures and wrote:

"As a result of discussions with the taxpayer and analysis of the canceled checks by the agents, it is our conclusion that there was sufficient cash for miscellaneous living expenses."

Copies of the audit summary were made available to reporters for The Washington Post and the Wall Street Journal this week by a supporter of the Jimmy Carter presidential campaign.

Lengthy Kennedy Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new house investigation into the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King may take years, according to the chief counsel for the committee that will conduct it.

Richard Sprague, who helped with the successful murder prosecution of former United Mine Workers president W. A. Boyle, made the assessment Thursday as he was sworn in as director of the house select committee on assassinations.

"You cannot do it by deadline," said Sprague. "A homicide investigation is an intensive job . . . it has to be recognized by everyone that work of this nature should be thought of in terms of years."

Sprague promised that "no document" or "no witness" would be beyond the reach of his investigation into the murder of the two American leaders.

Sprague said the committee had given him virtually carte blanche to look into the Kennedy and King deaths.

House committee Chairman Thomas Downing confirmed that committee members would not interfere in the investigation and were giving Sprague total control of his staff.

Auto Workers Win Time Off

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The United Auto Workers have won seven additional paid days off per year from the Ford Motor Co. in a breakthrough that the union hopes will lead to the first four-day week in a major American industry.

The UAW Thursday released details of the new contract negotiated with Ford. The No. 2 auto maker yielded the union only half the additional time off it had sought, but in doing so seemed to grant an important principle.

"This will provide a sound foundation for 1979 negotiations," the UAW leadership said of Ford's time-off concession, a signal that the four-day week is likely to be on the agenda three years from now in the next round of autoworkers' contract negotiations.

The union won substantial wage gains from Ford, consistent with recent patterns in the auto industry. Most workers will get 3 per cent increases each year, plus a cost-of-living adjustment to keep up with inflation. An assembly-line worker who now makes $6.52 an hour will earn $8.33 at the end of three years, the UAW estimates.

Other provisions of the new contract include the following:

—A cash payment of up to $600 to retired Ford workers, payable Jan. 1, 1978. The union's pension plan was not up for renegotiation this year, but the UAW said its retirees had to get something to help them cope with inflation.

—Special raises for the skilled trades.

—Improvements in the health care program, which already gives auto workers the best protection of any industrial employees in the country. It will now be extended to cover hearing aides and eyeglasses.

—Additional Ford contributions to the supplemental unemployment benefits (SUB) fund, which is meant to provide laid-off Ford workers with 95 per cent of their regular earnings.

Aircraft Firm Suing CIA

WASHINGTON (WP) — A maker of small aircraft that can take off from and land on tennis courts has charged the Central Intelligence Agency with illegally using its name as a cover to conduct covert operations and assassination plots overseas.

General Aircraft Corp. of Bedford, Mass., made this charge and others in a $25 million claim for damages it filed Thursday with the CIA.

The company claimed the CIA had used its name without its knowledge to cover up overseas activities of its personnel and agents.

These activities and their resulting notoriety, which attached to General Aircraft, made it impossible for the firm to sell its airplanes to the countries where the CIA operated, the company charged.

In the 1960s, General Aircraft said, its sales agents were about to close the sale of a large number of its planes to the Congo after face-to-face talks with the Congolese Premier Moise Tshombe. At the same time, General Aircraft charged, the CIA had agents in the Congo posing with forged documents as sales agents for Helio Aircraft, a General subsidiary.

"Such cover was used by these agents to carry on illegal and immoral activities which resulted in the death of government officials in the Congo and the fall of the existing government," General Aircraft charged in a 22-page claim delvered to CIA Director George Bush.

"These activities came to the attention of the Congo government and immediately resulted in the expulsion of Helio and its legitimate employees from any further operations."

Coal 'Worst Threat'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. government expert says the environmental threat from coal burning is worse than that posed by any other energy source including nuclear power.

Part of the reason, says Dr. James Liverman of the Energy Research and Development Administration, is that coal contains many pollutants and some of them are radioactive.

Another part, Liverman says, is that coal is the single largest source of carbon dioxide emissions. Such emissions, he says, may cause serious problems within 25 years from a "greenhouse effect" warming of the atmosphere.

"Coal is a very dirty substance," Liverman told a news conference Thursday, answering a question about which energy source, including atomic energy, poses the worst environment threat.

"If you could get pure carbon, that would be one thing. But when you mine coal you also get shale, and shale contains radium, vanadium, sulfur and a lot of other things. It's a real garbage pail."

The carbon dioxide problem, Liverman said, is one that scientists have worried about off and on for years.

SCHOOL CLEARED

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A Lane County Circuit Court jury here cleared Northwest Outward Bound School of blame in the 1971 death of a young woman student.

A suit sought $250,000 from the school for the death of Lorene Swan, Sudbury, Mass., who died of hypothermia in the Three Sisters Wilderness Area Sept. 2, 1971.

Her estate tried to show the school was egligent in not providing training to prevent the hypothermia deaths of her and Joyce Howden, Fall Creek.

They also claimed the school was negligent in not starting a search for the women until four days after they were believed missing.

The defence said the search was followed earlier than the plaintiffs said it was, and that the two women contributed to their own deaths by not following what they had been taught in the school.

The two were in a group of three women caught in a sudden storm while on a survival hike toward the end of the course.

COFFEE CONTROLS

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government has placed all types of coffee under import controls until Sept. 30, 1977, in an attempt to identify the cuase of the recent, worlwide jump in coffee prices and to determine whether additional measures can be taken to keep coffee prices in Canada down.

The move, which requires all importers of coffee products to obtain an import licence and to refer to it for each import during period, fulfils a requirement of the International Coffee Organization, a consumer and producing country group of which Canada is a member.

An official of the department of indsutry, trade and commerce said that the import licence requires importers to supply either certificates of origin or customs import forms from the exporting country for each shipment into Canada, so that Canadian officials can determine the type, amount and cost of coffee being brought into Canada.

There have been recent suspicions that part of the recent worldwide increases in coffee prices could be attributed to price manipulations by middlemen in the coffee trade.

B.C. Sales Tax To Stay at 7%

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday British Columbia's seven-per-cent sales tax won't be cut until there is a major improvement in the provincial economy and perhaps not even then.

Bennett said the sales tax, increased to seven per cent earlier this year from five per cent, was "heavy and onerous" but cited greater sales taxes in five Canadian provinces.

FOX SERVES NOTICE

Crackdown Vow On Prison Riots

Times News Service

OTTAWA — Federal prison directors have been told to take "strong, decisive and immediate "action to check any further outbreaks of destruction by prisoners.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox served notice that penitentiary officials will no longer "condone" acts like Thursday's major riot at Millhaven Penitentiary in Kingston, Ont., the second by inmates there in 24 hours. Guards used tear gas to break it up.

The newly-appointed solicitor-general said at a press conference the RCMP and Armed Forces are prepared to make a "strong, decisive and immediate response" to destructive actions by inmates in any federal institution. Inmates will be forced to live in their damaged cells and clean up after their riots, he said.

At the same time he appealed to both guards and inmates to "cool down" so that penitentiaries can function normally.

Fox refused to admit that he was embarking on a new "get tough" policy, but Thursday's action by the penitentiary service was the first sign of toughness in four recent incidents at federal institutions.

Late last week authorities negotiated with inmates of the B.C. Penitentiary for the release of a guard being held hostage and about the same time prisoners damaged and set fire to part of the Laval Penitentiary. Millhaven inmates went on the rampage Tuesday night, but it was not until the second wave of destruction at the institution that force was used by authorities.

He attributed the Millhaven outbreak to "verbal escalation of charges and coutnercharges." He said the prisoners' committee there was helpful in restoring order.

Fox said he has issued orders that from now on prison authorities is must "in no way" seem to condone destruction at federal institutions.

He said inmates are being told "that there is nothing to be gained by this type of behavior." The Millhaven inmates, he added, have been advised that they will have to live in their cells in the state they were left in after the riot for a while and that they have to clean up the mess themselves.

The solicitor-general said that so far he has received no evidence to support charges by the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) that there is a conspiracy among inmates to make the penitentiary system unworkable through deliberate acts of destruction. But if some evidence is found, he added, the RCMP will be ordered to investigate and charges will be laid where possible.

Fox said that the B.C. incident was different because a guard's life was at stake and the government had received the approval of "a substantial part" of the guard's union (PSAC) or negotiating for the man's release.

An administrative inquiry will be held at Millhaven.

Duncan Murder Charged

DUNCAN — An 18-year-old Duncan youth has been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment following a shotgun slaying Thursday night.

The name of the youth was withheld until he appears in court.

Police said Frederick Peter Mercer, 19, of Duncan, was shot at close range with a shotgun about 11:30 p.m. in the beer parlor of the Village Green Inn.

He died about an hour later en route to Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria.

Police said the suspect was arrested at the scene of the shooting.

Inn manager Dave Rose said today no one in the pub Thursday night saw any sign of a gun until just before the shootin .

He said patrons saw a man carrying the shotgun approach a pool table and level a blast at the victim's chest.

The man was immediately grabbed by some patrons, Rose said, and held until police arrived.

Ross said there didn't appear to be any obvious reason for the shooting.

"He just walked in and did his thing," he said of the man with the gun.

Socred Purge Called Payoff

An NDP MLA charged today the firings of five members of the Land Commission is the first step by the Social Credit government in the dismembering of the act.

"The way I see it, the firings are part one of the dissassembling of the act and all it stands for," warned Prince Rupert MLA Graham Lea.

Lea claimed the move is a "payoff of a political debt" to the real estate industry for its cash aid to Socred finances.

"They (realtors) put money into Socred coffers. They knocked on doors during the last election. Now they are expecting to be paid off," the former NDP highway minister said.

Fired were Vic Brank, Mary Rawson, A. E. Garrish, Ted Barsby and Don Knoerr, all of whom found letters on their desks Wednesday telling them they had been relieved of their posts.

The commissioners are responsible for administration of the Land Commission Act passed by the NDP in 1973. The legislation freezes certain areas of the province as agriculture land and prohibits commercial or industrial development.

Environment Minister Jim Neilsen Thursday said they have been replaced by Sarjit Max Singh, a Surrey vegetable grower, Alan Claridge, a fruit grower from Oyama in the Okanagan, Ted Cornwall, a recently retired provincial agriculture employee now living in Williams Lake, and Raymond Kerr, a Kamloops cattle rancher.

Ralph Barichello, president of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said today he interprets the move by the government as "perhaps questioning the recommendations made by the land commission in recent decisions."

He referred to a controversial case in Chilliwack in which the town council has asked the commission to release more than 1,700 acres from the agriculture land reserve. The commission has rejected the application.

"Maybe it was getting too hot for the cabinet . . . they had received a lot of complaints from people about some of the commissions decisions."

He said the dismissals of the commissioners didn't "alarm him" but said he was surprised by the timing.

"Hopefully it will not be a retrograde step but the question we have to know is what motivated the move at this time."

Commission chairman Gary Runka, the only NDP appointee to survive the purge, said he does not think there will be any change in focus of the commission's aims and responsibilities.

"I think all the new commissioners are dedicated to preserving agriculture land," he said this morning. "But frankly it's too early to say. I only know one (Cornwall) and he's a good man."

Kerr, in a telephone interview from Kamloops today, indicated however, there could be some changes.

NEWS BRIEFS

B.C. Borrows $60M

VANCOUVER (CP) — The municipal Finance Authority of British Columbia has borrowed $60 million in the New York market, MFA chairman Ron Andrews said Thursday. The funds will be loaned to 40 municipalities and 11 regional districts for use in capital projects.

No Jobless Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment edged down from 7.9 per cent to 7.8 per cent of the United States work force in September after three consecutive monthly increases, the government said today, but there was virtually no improvement in the over-all job picture as total employment also declined slightly last month.

Another Protest

PARIS (Reuter) — French trade union leaders have fixed another day of protest following a 24-hour general strike Thursday against Prime Minister Raymond Barre's anti-inflation plans.

Airport Guarded

LONDON (UPI) — Armed troops returned to London's Heathrow Airport today and set up road blocks on its 10 miles of perimeter roads. A police spokesman said the troops were at Heathrow carrying out a contingency exercise, "in view of the ever-present threat of terrorist action."

Booby Trap Fatal

BELFAST (UPI) — A booby-trap explosion killed a reserve policeman and injured four British soldiers today near Kilrea, 40 miles northwest of here. The policeman and troops were checking an abandoned auto parked just outside the Londonderry town that had been hijacked the previous night.

255 Arrested In Drug Sweep

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what was described as a major disruption of Mexico-to-U.S. heroin smuggling operations, U.S. federal drug agents Thursday arrested 255 persons believed to be key figures in 49 different illegal drug distribution networks around the country.

Beginning with pre-dawn arrests that continued throughout the day, narcotics agents swept through 34 cities and seized about 46 pounds of Mexican-grown heroin with a street sales value of more than $20 million.

New Economic Strategy Promised by Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised Thursday to announce new economic measures in the coming parliamentary session to help fight inflation.

He said new economic strategies are required in several areas, including employment policies, labor-management relations, the sharing of social responsibility, decentralization of federal operations and growth and investment.

The prime minister, speaking to a group of businessmen, said present wage and price controls would be scrapped on schedule in 1978, "or sooner if economic conditions are favorable."

"They will not be extended," he told a subdued audience of 900 who had spent the bulk of a one-day conference attacking the government restraint program. "They will end."

Trudeau said he will use the policy-previewing speech from the throne next Tuesday to announce new job creation programs, re-designed social welfare plans and the government's intention of co-operating more closely with business and labor.

Those, and other initiatives, would help reduce the risk of future inflationary explosions.

The prime minister said the government is committed to ending wage and price controls within the next two years because they had created "their own kind of economic disruption and social injustice."

★ $500 MILLION BEFORE DELIVERY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government will have spent more than $500 million on Lockheed Aurora patrol planes before one of the aircraft is delivered to the armed forces, a study of the contract with the company shows.

Lockheed Aircraft Corp. should receive about $697 million for the 18 Auroras that Canada is buying to replace the Argus patrol plane. Of that, $567 million will have been paid when the first aircraft are delivered in May, 1980.

While the price tag on the aircraft totals just less than $700 million, the deal will cost Canada slightly more than $1 billion. Taxes and federal spending on support for the aircraft account for the difference.

Government officials said this week there is nothing strange in so much front money being spent on a major defence contract.

But Allan McKinnon of Victoria, Progressive Conservative defence critic who is highly critical of the Lockheed purchase, said Thursday:

"If Lockheed goes belly up we are out millions and all we will have is a bunch of plane parts and equipment."

$650,000 Anti-Booze Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department will spend $650,000 of taxpayers' money telling them not to get drunk, not to drink and drive and not toa ccept a drink if they don't want one.

"This is not a fight against drinking," federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde told a news conference launching the campaign Thursday. "It is a fight against irresponsible drinking."

The advertising program, eating up a sizable chunk of the health department's approximate $9 million information budget, is mainly a method to bolster regulations already in force to keep drinking at reasonable levels, Lalonde said. Those include drinking age limits, controls on alcohol advertising and education programs, all of which vary from province to province.

Meantime, federal health officials are continuing a series of meetings aimed at reaching agreement on minimum standards across the country on other tools for regulating liquor consumption.

BULLET-PROOF CABS?

CALGARY (CP) — Some Calgary taxi drivers are considering installing bullet-proof shields between the front and back seats of their cabs after the death of a fellow driver last weekend, Floyd Shaw, taxi commission general manager, said Thursday.

But there really is very little taxi drivers can do to protect themsleves, Shaw said.

Drivers became concerned after police discovered the body of Ahmad Sabbagh, 23, in a ditch beside his cab Saturday morning. There were two bullet wounds in his head and his money had been stolen. Police have arrested two men in connection with the death.

City police inspector Don Nelson said eveything possible was already being done to protect the drivers.

If a driver is in trouble a code red is radioed to the company dispatcher. The message is relayed to police and a squad car is on the scene "as soon as humanly possible," the inspector said.

"But how can a driver reach for his radio when someone in the back seat has a gun or a knife jammed behind his ear?" Shaw asked.

More Tankers If Kitimat-Edmonton Pipe Built

VANCOUVER (CP — Secret B.C. government documents argue that a proposed oil pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton would increase rather than decrease tanker traffic down the west coast, according to the Vancouver Sun.

The nespaper says the documents advise the provincial cabinet to reject the $450 million pipeline proposal.

They were prepared by the environment and land use committee secretariat, backed up by Environment Canada.

The 750-mile pipeline proposed by a consortium of companies headed by Trans-Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver would consist of a 36-inch line capable of transporting 350,000 to 750,000 barrels of crude oil a day from a terminal in Kitimat to connect in Edmonton with an existing oil line to mid-west refineries in the United States.

Trans-Mountain is expected to make an application to build the pipeline to the National Energy Board this fall so that construction can start in 1977, with completion expected in 1979.

Company president Ken Hall has said the pipeline would reduce tanker traffic down the B.C. coast by 50 per cent. His claim, however, is rejected by one of the documents.

In a confidential memorandum dated June 8 on letterhead of the environment and land use committee secretariat, Denis O'Gorman, acting secretariat director, says the line "would in fact increase oil traffic to B.C. with ships coming from the Persian gulf, some of them 250,000 tons in size and perhaps poorly constructed and maintained."

The memo compares the big ships with the "well maintained and constructed" 80,000 to 120,000 ton tankers from Alaska.

"The choice of Kitimat as an oil terminus will make the entire northern half of the B.C. coast vulnerable to spills," says the memo. "Difficult navigation routes and poor climate greatly enhance the likelihood of spills.

The documents also say:

—That an oil spill is inevitable, regardless of safety measure taken;

—That the schedule is too tight for the necessary environmental studies to be undertaken;

—That the proposal has few benefits for Canadians;

—That job opportunities in northern B.C. would be minimal and the social impact of transient workers severe.

A June report to the secretariat says that if the oil needs of Washington state and the midwest were combined,

Police Pick Up Belknap Ward

A 13-year-old Nanaimo boy, recently at the centre of a cour tcase involving B.C.'s superintendent of child welfare, was picked up today in Nanaimo after fleeing from a Saanich group home.

Nanaimo RCMP said the boy was picked up by plainclothes police on a downtown street and placed in jail pending an investigation of his actions since be left the home Thursday afternoon.

Meanwhile, Mr. Justice John Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court reserved decision in Vancouver Thursday in the appeal by Victor Belknap, child welfare superintendent, against a conviction and $250 fine levied Aug. 30 in Nanaimo provincial court.

At that time the 13-year-old, one of thousands under Belknap's supervision, was found guilty of a $50 breaking, entering and theft.

But because of the boy's lengthy record of crimes during escapes from detention, Judge Stanley Wardill fined Belknap because he is responsible for the juvenile.

There were two main questions debated in the appeal:

Can a civil servant be found personally liable for actions by those falling within his jurisdiction?

Should the Crown — in this case the Attorney-General's department — appeal a conviction from an action brought about in a lower court by a Crown prosecutor?

Ralph Hutchinson, counsel for the provincial government, said that Belknap was the juvenile's guardian "not by choice — he has to accept the people sent to him."

For Belknap to be held legally responsible for the juvenile found guilty by Judge Wardill, he said, there would have to be some form of "connivance" between the juvenile and himself.

Richard Bledsoe, also representing the Crown, argued that in the Belknap case there had been no prior notification to the accused that Judge Wardill intended to make him legally rsponsible for the juvenile's theft, as required under the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

"He wasn't given the opportunity to appear and hear what the judge was about to do," Bledsoe said, suggesting this was "a denial of natural justice."

John Hall, a friend of the court representing Judge Wardill, said the law on the "whole convoluted area of Crown officers" evolved from ships of war centuries ago "and we are going to develop new laws—those of old England do not apply in British Columbia."

Although Belknap had not personally been given prior knowledge of the judge's intended action against him, Hall said, his section of the human resources department in Nanaimo had.

Furthermore, he said, Judge Wardill had found "lack of supervision and care" of the juvenile who "was running wild."

In the end, Hall argued, 'the best interests of the child are the essence of the case" and the judgment should stand.

Meanwhile in Vancouver, Dennis Kent, co-ordinator of juvenile services in the corrections branch of the attorney-general's department, said Thursday that local Crown prosecutors will soon have the authority to ask that juvenile delinquents be tried in adult court without first referring the request to Victoria.

Presses Idle On Labor's Protest Day

The Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist won't publish on Oct. 14, labor's day of protest.

Members of the Pressmen's Union employed by Victoria Press Ltd., publisher of the two daily papers, have voted not to report for work on that day, thus effectively shutting down the operation.

The mailers have also decided to stay off the job as has the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union, which represents printers at Victoria Press as well as printers at the Vancouver Sun and Province.

Members of the Newspaper Guild in the editorial and business offices of Victoria Press have been asked by national headquarters to stay on the job.

In the event the two papers do not publish, a Victoria Press spokesman said today all subscribers will receive a 15-cent rebate on their monthly bill and carriers will not lose any of their normal monthly profits as a result of the missed day's delivery.

As well as doing without their daily papers on Oct. 14, it appears Greater Victoria residents will also experience some delays in telephone service.

About 225 Victoria area members of the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. voted Thursday night to support their officers call to observe the day of protest.

There are about 630 Victoria-area members of the federation which represents plant workers such as linemen and installers as well as clerical staff and operators.

A spokesman said if the operators do not report for work, there will be no noticeable difference for local or direct dialed calls but there could be some delays in getting information or placing calls through supervisors filling in for the operators.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Labor Relations Board announced it will rule Tuesday — two day's before the protest day — on whether the protest is legal.

Board Chairman Paul Weiler said the board, acting on an application from B.C. Hydro, will rule on whether the work stoppage would be a strike within the meaning of the provincial Labor code.

Support for the protest has come from the B.C. Railway unions.

Jack Whittaker, chairman of the joint Council of B.C. Railway unions, says the railway will be shut down for 24 hours as the council has unanimously endorsed the attack on federal wage controls.

On the national scene, delegates to the 30th convention of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers in Montreal, have urged their 40,000 members to support the day of protest.

Workers in several brotherhood locals in Montreal, New Brunswick and parts of Ontario have rejected a walkout, but leaders of locals in Vancouver, Toronto and Winnipeg say their members support strike action.

TOWN TALK

Premier Bill Bennett made a pay-off to a political rival this week, but the financial transaction is not likely to turn into another Sky Shops Affair.

It was all in the cause of charity.

It's not Finkelstein's first campaign.

Last year he was campaign manager for the Liberal candidate in the Kelowna riding who ran against, and lost to, Premier Bennett.

Gerry Splatt, a regular Town Talk reader and recently retired manager of Royal London Wax Museum, was surprised to read here that new Canadian figures were on display in the place.

We mentioned the paucity of figures with a Canadian connotation, compared with displays bearing little or no relation to Canadian achievement.

Splatt invited us back for a second look, urging us to keep a sharp eye for John Diefenbaker, Sir John A. Macdonald, Field Marshall Alexander, Sir James Douglas, Ge. James Wolfe and his adversary Louis de Montcalm, Capt. George Vancouver, Capt. James Cook, Chief Dan George, and a Mountie.

Yes, Gerry, they do have Canadian content. But we are plumping for "truly Canadian figures of stature," to quite the previous item. People of international acclaim.

Six of your examples, though important to Canada, are not Canadians.

SIMMONS

Members of the Victoria police force aren't the only ones to strike it rich on sweeps and lotteries these days. How about employees of the fire department?

Chief. Eric Simmons and two secretaries in his office, Mrs. Anne Crawford and Mrs. Tenna Johnston, shared the grand prize — a new car — in the Saanich Rotary-CFAX fishing derby raffle.

Not only that. And as they sold the ticket to themselves they got the seller's prize, a new stereo set.

Cashing in both prizes they realized a net gain of $5,300 or $1,766 each.

Their first decision was to thank the young lady who had pulled their ticket from the drum — 10-year-old Julia Leong. The thanks came in a card and a crisp hundred-dollar bill.

Simmons says they're so confident their fortune is on the rise they're reinvesting a portion of the winnings in other lotto and sweep tickets. They've even formed a "company."

The Times newsroom coveted sour Mandarin orange and sticky candy cane prizes this year go to reporter Paul Nicholson who spotted the first Christmas commercial on TV.

Nicholson claims the prize for being tse first to call the city desk with news of the rare Oct. 6 sighting of Santa Claus flogging Eveready batteries during a Vancouver Canucks hockey broadcast on BCTV Channel 8.

Duplicate awards go to Eveready and ctv.

He says there is no plan to post dual signs to ease motorists into thinking metric either.

"That would be ridiculous," he says.

Why? Well, for one thing the conversation isn't exact; 30 miles an hour is 48 kilometres an hour, not 50, as the speed limit will be a year from now.

Never mind dat lousy English garbage, any'v youse guys speak da good ol' American lingo, like it says in da magazine?

The magazine in question is the Paris-based monthly, Mon Tricot Knit and Crochet. The informational index tells us it's published by the Compagnie des Editions de l'Alama in — get this — "French, German, American, English, Spanish, Italian, Dutch and Portuguese."

American? Yup, dat's what it sez.

Authenticity can only go so far, operators of the old-English style Mediaeval Inn discovered early today — an open hearth cooking fire just doesn't cut it with the city fire department.

Firefighters were called in at about 5:20 a.m. to extinguish a kitchen fire caused when a cook from the previous night's shift left a pan of meat bones in the oven and forgot to turn off the heat.

Some smoke damage was also caused, but the fire was not serious. Deputy Chief Carl Coates said. He estimated damage at $500.

Unlike Alberta, B.C., is not going to instal metric speed signs before the big conversion day next September. Says Art Rowbottom, metric engineer with the highways department.

Rowbottom says the national plan is to introduce the new signs "cold turkey" and B.C. will follow suit.

The man who invented the Conibear animal trap received $1,000 on his 80th birthday from the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies in recognition of his more humane trap.

In 1960 Conibear received a $800 cash award and a certificate of merit from the American Humane Association.

A former trapper, Conibear invented the trap in the 1920s when trapping in the Northwest Territories. It was patented in 1968.

The trap is being widely sold as a less cruel alternative to the leg-hold trap. It's light, compact, easy to handle and really effective for small animals which are usually killed immediately.

Intern Pact To End

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria General Hospital has moved to terminate a contract with the Professional Association of Residents and Interns.

Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations at the hospital, said a letter was written to PARI Sept. 20 asking to cancel the contract.

The contract will end a month after the letter was sent, Oct. 20, he said.

O'Brien said the move was taken after the 10 interns at the hospital chose not to belong to the association, set up about three years ago to negotiate wages and working conditions for residents and interns at B.C. hospitals.

Dr. Albert Doucette, one of the interns at Victoria General, said when the latest group of interns arrived at the hospital in June they chose not to join PARI.

Instead, he said, they opted to form their own bargaining group and have one of the interns negotiate on behalf of the rest.

Doucette said Victoria General is unique among the province's five teaching hospitals which have agreements with PARI because it has the smallest number of interns and no residents.

He said PARI is more effective for the larger hospitals, such as Vancouver General where there are 300 residents who form a major power bloc in the hospital and are there for up to four years.

Interns only put in one year at the hospitals, he added.

He said if Victoria General interns had belonged to PARI they wouldn't actually have a member at the bargaining table as they will under the proposed arrangement.

Doucette said arrangements for negotiations for the 10 interns will begin once the PARI contract with the hospital ends Oct. 20.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, said 15 of the 16 residents at Jubilee have joined PARI.

He said negotiations are under way to work out a new contract between PARI and the five teaching hospitals. The last contract expired Dec. 31, 1975.

Dr. Pickles, who is chairman of the hospitals' negotiating committee, said both sides are "fairly close" to an agreement.

The provinces residents and interns went on strike for 10 days in 1975 in a dispute with the B.C. Health Association over wages and working conditions.

Manpower Survey Forecasts Grey Days Ahead for Jobless

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's economy took another downturn in September and the outlook for the remainder of this year is fairly grim, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

The latest developments:

—The lumber market will be jolted by a decline in prices and demand within weeks, according to reports from the main market area, the U.S. Atlantic Coast. Vancouver Island sawmills will have to locate new markets to maintain production levels.

—Consumer spending was down about 5 per cent in Victoria during September, compared with a usual increase of 15 per cent. Retail sales continue to be slow this month.

—Closure of the grain elevator in Victoria will have a spinoff effect this fall and will lead to layoffs in some supply industries. Longshoremen will also be affected.

—The number of available jobs continues to be low. There were 1,900 jobs listed on the Canada Manpower office during September, down 10 per cent from the previous September, and there were about 8,000 people sought work at the Canada Manpower office during the month.

—Restuarant sales were down in September, except for the fast-food chains.

Purdy said the main problem continues to be weakness in the forest products industry.

"There are indications there will be an improvement by spring but in the meantime things may get a bit worse," he said.

Ed Vermiere, manager of the B.C. Forest Products sawmill, confirmed that markets are expected to turn weak in the United States for the remainder of the year. The company is trying to divert sales to the European Common Market and Japan.

"The United Kingdom is a major customer of ours but they are having difficulty buying our lumber because of the devaluation of the pound," he said.

Present staff levels at the sawmill is 485, which is about normal. The mill operates at a peak capacity with about 500 workers.

Vermiere said the company hopes to ride out the storm and keep all 485 employees on during the winter.

"We try to maintain stability of employment and not lay off workers whenever there is a fluctuation in the market," he said.

The company has storage problems because of its relatively-small acreage on Gorge Road but is moving lumber out on scows to its Crofton dock as quickly as possble. Some lumber may stay in Crofton for a long period of time before it moves to market, he said.

Frank Lourson, assistant manager of the BCFP plywood plant, said staff level is down to 245, only 67 per cent of capacity, and there is no hope of increasing the total at this time. The company hopes to maintain the present staff level, however, despite poor market conditions.

Meanwhile Purdy said a Canada Manpower survey compiled by information officer Dan Bowes. Shown retail sales surged for the first week in September during the back-to-school period but flattened out after that.

"Except for sale days, the stores had a quiet month."

He said this trend is continuing through October and there may not be a buying surge until the Christmas season.

This caution reflects the generally weak economic conditions.

"We remain optimistic that a recovery will be under way by March. Things will get better but the immediate outlook is not good."

Dicey Skies For Holiday

Like the popular British pub drink, the weather will be half and half on the holiday weekend.

Saturday will be much like today but Sunday could be "a tossup", according to a spokesman for the Victoria weather office at the Victoria International Airport.

Beginning either Sunday or Monday temperatures are expected to cool, skies become cloudy, accompanied by the wet stuff that's plagued British Columbia most of the summer.

Black Experience Documented In Drama Series

South by Northwest, a series of five docu-dramas detailing black involvement in history from the late 1700's to the late 1800's, has been acquired by Public TV 9 for broadcast Saturdays at 9:30 p.m. beginning October 9.

The series was recognized officially by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Under the Media Recognition Program, the programs were cited for "outstanding participation" in the Bicentennial.

The debut program is York — focusing on the black servant of Lt. William Clark. Due to York's active role in the successful Lewis and Clark expeditions, he earned his freedom upon the party's return to Missouri in 1806.

On October 16 at 9:30 p.m., Homesteaders are the subject. These black homesteaders came to the Pacific Northwest prior to the Civil War both as freedmen and as slaves. One of these pioneers was George Bush, one of the first American settlers of the state of Washington. His eldest son later became a state legislator and an Indian interpreter for Governor Stevens. Bush is portrayed by KCTS/9 staff member Cleven Ticeson.

The third program explores the role of black cowboys in the cattle drive era. Based on research and the stories of eighty-seven year old cowboy Walter Jackson, the show recreates a typical cattle drive from Texas to Montana between 1880-1890.

Cowboy Walter Jackson also provided material for the fourth episode of South by Northwest. On Montana Bound Part II, Walter relates the stories of Cattle Kate and Mary Fields. Esther Rolles is featured in this episode as the six-foot, 200-pound, cigar smoking, gun-tottin' pioneer Fields.

The final program examines The Roslyn Migration. Even before this tough mining town was laid out, Irish, Scottish, and Welsh coal miners were attracted to the region. By 1888, these miners, tired of long hours and hard work, struck: violence soon followed. Former coal miner James Sheppardson agreed to solicit the migration of members of his group for the Northern Pacific — a tactful way for the railroad to get black strike breakers.

Those blacks who came to Roslyn were met by hostility — yet still they came: by 1889, there were over 400 blacks working the mines.

STUDY SESSION — British actors Sir Ralph Richardson and Sir John Gielgud took time out recently in Toronto to study lines for Global television comedy show, Second City. Titled, Never a Cross Word, the sketch will be aired in Canada in December. Richardson and Gielgud are starring in No Man's Land, the season opener at the Royal Alex Theatre in Toronto.

Multi-culturalism Stressed

What do a 16-year-old Vietnamese war orphan, two Mexican-American brothers aged 12 and 13, and a 9-year-old black girl share in common? Rebop. Rebop is a cultural common denominator that seeks and finds unity in diversity.

Each Rebop program, airing Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. beginning October 9, is a collection of mini-documentaries about young people from diverse backgrounds. Kelly is 9 years old and lives in Watts; she is training to become a member of the Flying Souls, the only black trapeze act in the country. Through the strong guidance of her teacher Omar, and a rigorous training process, Kelly not only makes the team, but gains an appreciation for discipline, concentration and love of self. As she puts it: "Now that I can fly, I feel proud."

Rodney is a 10-year-old Native American of the Cahuillian tribe. A silversmith since the age of 5, he spends much of his time at the Morongo Indian Reservation, where his ties with his culture and his people are nurtured. His motorcycle-riding skills also are sharpened at the reservation.

Kelly and Robert are only two of the many children featured on Rebop. All of the stories are real, and offer meaningful insight into the lives of the children of America's minorities. The program producers believe that a heightened awareness of the experiences and attitudes of these young people can help everyone find some insight into the future of this country.

Rebop's basic theme of cultural pluralism is reflected not only in program content, but in the organization of the production staff and the make-up of its National Advisory Board. Comprised of three black, three white, three Hispanic, three American Indian, and three Asian members, the Rebop advisory board plays an integral part in determining the direction of the series.

'Walsh's Animals' Returns to TV 9

Walsh's Animals, a series that makes viewers feel more at home with their pets while teaching them about wild animals and endangered species, returns to the air Saturdays at 8 p.m. beginning October 9, as part of Public TV 9's Family Night entertainment.

Each program is full of animals and startling facts. Films show beautiful scenes of animals in the wild — as well as disturbing sights of human abuse and ignorance.

John Walsh, host of the series, is familiar with all facets of animal life. He spent most of his childhood on a homemade raft in Boston's Charles River, observing wildlife. His fascination with animals kept growing, and his hobby soon became a career. Since joining the International Society for the Protection of Animals in 1965 as a field officer, Walsh's expertise has been utilized all over the world.

His films and photographs of seals being clubbed to death and skinned alive have been instrumental in bringing reforms to that industry. When Florence and Venice were flooded in 1966, it was Walsh who was called to set up facilities to aid animals. He did the same for water fowl contaminated in the Torrey Canyon oil spill disaster off the coast of England. In 1970, Walsh directed an emergency rescue mission for animals and people in Peru, which had been devastated by severe earthquakes.

The largest and most dangerous animal rescue ever attempted was Operation Gwanba — and John Walsh again was the man who led it. He rescued nearly 10,000 jungle animals threatened by the rising waters of a lake created by a new hydroelectric dam in South America.

Walsh also is a warm and personable television personality, whose feelings about animals are contagious. He just might succeed in making his slogan "Extinct is Forever" a household phrase.

Walsh's Animals begins with The Wolf in Your Back Yard — or the dog. The show is co-hosted by Walsh's own dog — which was rescued from the South American jungle flood.

The program also features a proud mother with her 12 Irish setter pups, first aid for the injured dog, examples of the dog over-population problems, and a look at the threatened and much maligned wolf.

Children's Classic Featured

Once Upon a Classic, a series of award-winning children's classics and contemporary adventure films never before seen on U.S. television, will be broadcast on Public TV 9 Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. beginning October 9.

According to host Bill Bixby, "American families will be very excited about Once Upon a Classic. These quality productions appeal to all ages and give families the unique opportunity to watch television together and share some of the greatest adventures ever told."

Theatre Series Kills Repeats

For the first time in its six-year history, Masterpiece Theatre this season will present 52 consecutive weeks of new programming on Public TV 9 without a single repeat.

The public television drama series, a consistent yearly Emmy Award-winner since its electronic curtain first went up on "The First Churchills" in 1970, will open its current season Sunday, October 10 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9 with a four-part adaptation of Madame Bovary, Gustave Flaubert's classic, with Francesca Anna in the title role of the tragically romantic adultress.

Sixteen weeks of the new 1976-77 season will be devoted to Upstairs, Downstairs, as the residents of 165 Eaton Place make their way through the Jazz Age to the final episode. This series of the adventures and misadventures of an upper-class English family and its below-stairs entourage has accumulated six Emmys in the past three years. Last season, Upstairs, Downstairs received its third successive award as "Outstanding Drama Series," while Gordon Jackson (Hudson) joined the previously honored Jean March (Rose) as winner in the "Outstanding Performer" category. Director Bill Bain and host Alistair Cooke also have received recognition for their roles.

Upstairs, Downstairs will be followed by Poldark, a sixteen episode English western. Other series include Richard Llewellyn's How Green Was My Valley and Dorothy Sayers' "Five Red Herrings."

Safeguards Act Set For Debate

Initiative Measure No. 325, the Nuclear Safeguards Act relating to the regulation of nuclear fission facilities, their construction and operation and the disposition of nuclear wastes, will be debated on Candidates and Issues October 9th at 5 p.m. on Channel 5.

Participating in the debate with the affirmative case is Ruth Weiner, Dean of Huxley College at Western Washington State College, Bellingham, and Robert Lambson, an economist for the Boeing Company and research director for Initiative Measure No. 325.

Opposing Initiative No. 325 are Gene Woodruff, an associate professor at the University of Washington in nuclear engineering and Harold Moss, deputy director of the Urban League in Tacoma.

The 30-minute debate will be moderated by Frank Tenczar, of KING TV Public Affairs.

Garner Tougher Than Rockford

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — NBC told Jim Garner to change his television series last year and Garner told the network to go to hell.

Garner is like that — independent, sure of his ground and tougher than Jim Rockford, the private eye he portrays every week.

These stellar qualities are responsible for the fact that The Rockford Files is beginning its third prime time year as one of NBC-TV's strongest series.

"Some of those guys wanted changes made and they hadn't even seen th show," sqid the big, handsome Oklahoman. "I told them we would do it our way or not at all."

Jim (part Cherokee Indian) owns Cherokee Productions, which produces "The Rockford Files." When he goes head-to-head with the network or Universal Studios, where the show is filmed, his adversaries are dealing with more than just an actor.

Garner knows that for every successful series there is a star who fights for his show every inch of the way.

Danny Thomas, Jack Lord, Telly Savalas, Bobby Blake are just a few who save their shows from committee decisions, which ultimately lead to cancellation.

Each star has a different style of running his show, of course. Lucille Ball was almost single-handedly responsible for the longevity of her series.

"I leave the scripts to Meta Rosenberg, my partner, and to Steve Cannell," Jim said. "What I fight is proudction. I keep production going.

"For example, there are 26 units shooting at this studio right now. You've got to fight for space, equipment and transportation. Fortunately, I've got my own crew of top people and I hang onto them.

"If a star just shows up and reads his lines, the show won't last a season. The only one who takes a beating when a show fails is the actor.

"The producers, writers, directors and stagehands simply go to work in other projects. The star, however, is stuck."

Garner's biggest battles are with NBC's standards and compliances department — the censors. Garner says the blue pencil guys are harder on his series than any other.

"There's a definite double standard for violence on television," Garner said. "They have one set of rules for series and another for movies that are shown on the tube.

"They refused to allow us to show Rockford being knocked down by a judo chop to the neck. It was okay to film the heavy start the blow, but then they wanted us to cut to Rockford falling to the ground without the hit being seen.

"Yet I tuned in Magnum Force and there was Clint Eastwood blowing up everybody on the screen with guns. In Walking Tall they had a guy running around with a club bashing in people's skulls.

"These same guys forbid any character pointing a gun at Rockford. Are you ready for that?

There's even triple standard at the network. Police Story and Police Woman get away with a hell of a lot more than we do.

"So I fight them all the way down the line. I don't believe any network executive should be allowed to cut and edit film. I do my own cutting on the set by selecting what will be shot and what won't be shot.

"I have a terrific film editor who takes care of the cutting when we've completed each episode.

"I have more faith in my judgment than in corporate executives. That's why I'm in charge of The Rockford Files.

"Look at it this way, I've been making episodic television for almost 20 years — going back to Maverick. I was deeply involved in that series while most network executives, who weren't even in the business, were only watching it."

Garner is as good a businessman as he is an actor. He's branching out into other series projects. And while he may not be a pussycat to deal with, NBC likes his style.

The network is beaming his 90-minute pilot show of Scott Free, a new Cherokee Production, Oct. 13.

"I think it's got a great chance to become a series," Garner said. "And you can bet I'll go to bat for that show too."

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY presents The Biscuit Eater, Part I, set in the sprawling meadows and green forests of rural Tennessee in 1946. This sensitive, at times humorous, story is about two 13-year-old boys and their efforts to train a misfit hound into a champion bird dog. Earl Holliman, Patricia Crowley, Lew Ayres and Godfrey Cambridge, above, star in this feature film making its television premiere Sunday at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.

Puccini, O'Neill Start Season

Great Performances returns to Public TV October 13 with a whole new lineup of fine theatre, music and dance specials. The programs air Wednesdays at 9 p.m. and Sundays at 10 p.m.

Beginning the series, whose acquisition by and presentation on KCTS-9 is underwritten by Pacific Northwest Bell, is Eugene O'Neill's only comedy—Ah Wilderness. This universally appealing tale of a young man's romantic escapades, written in 1932, recalls to a contemporary audience a nostalgic vision of America's past.

Ah Wilderness marks Connecticut's Long Wharf Theatre's third appearance on Theatre in America-Great Performances. Acclaimed for their performance in Forget-Me-Not Lane and The Widowing of Mrs. Holroyd, the company's state production of Ah Wilderness was judged "enchanting" by Brendan Gill and Clive Barnes.

The cast for the TV production includes Richard Backus (as Richard Miller), Geraldine Fitzgerald (as Essie Miller), William Swetland (as Nat Miller), and Joyce Ebert (as Lily Miller). The program was produced by Lindsay Laws, and directed by Long Wharf Artistic Director Arvin Brown.

Giacomo Puccini's lyric and melodic tragedy, Madame Butterfly, airs the following week, a prime example of Great Performances' fine music specials. For this special television production, Herbert von Karajan conducts the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, and an international cast headed by Mirella Freni as the geisha Butterfly and Placido Domingo as the American lieutenant. A perennial opera house favorite, Madame Butterfly details the personal tragedy of a young geisha and her hopeless love for a brash American Navy lieutenant to whom she is sold into marriage. Although the geisha soon is deserted by her husband—who has planned all along to marry the girl back home—she remains faithful to him and bears his child. Living in seclusion with her baby, she rejects all suitors brought by the marriage broker.

After three years, the lieutenant and his American wife Kate return to Japan: Kate asks Butterfly for the child, but the geisha only will give up her son to his father. She prefers to take her own life and, by so doing, die with honor.

SUPERPICKER ROY CLARK FULL OF FUN

He's considered one of the best guitarists in the world. He's a master of many other instruments, including violin, piano, trumpet, trombone, and drums. At the age of 14 he won the national Country Music Banjo Championship. He won it again when he was 15. He has produced a number of hit records as a vocalist, singing everything from down-home country favorites to Charles Aznavour love ballads.

But ask Roy Clark what his real specialty is and he'll tell you: "I'll do anything within reason that's funny. For me, making people laugh is the greatest feeling in the world."

The versatile and talented Clark, who was named the Country Music Association's Entertainer of the Year in 1973, will co-host, with Johnny Cash, the tenth annual Country Music Association Awards presentations, to be broadcast live from the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn., Monday, October 11 at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Clark has always included light patter, snappy retorts, novelty numbers and digs at himself as part of his act, but his talent for humor — not to mention his music — came to the attention of the whole country (and not just "country" country) when he began appearing on The Beverly Hillbillies series some years back, playing both Cousin Roy and Cousin Roy's mother, Big Mama Halsey, before moving on to co-host Hee Haw on the Network. Since then, he's made countless television appearances, and he's played as many as 340 dates in a year. Moreover, he packs them in Las Vegas nine weeks a year.

Considering his success, it is startling to learn that Clark, until recently, lacked confidence in his abilities as a performer.

"I don't consider myself a fantastic musician," he says. "I just have fun with my playing. I do more or less the obvious and spice it up a bit with clowning around. Really, what I do on stage is just an exaggeration of myself.

"I know I'm not the greatest guitar player, and I'm not the greatest comedian or a great singer. So I have to do a little of all of them. When people ask me what I do, I just tell them, 'I'm an entertainer.' "

Antarctica World On TV 9

Nova journeys to the isolated world of Antarctica on Ninety Degrees Below, an encore science adventure being broadcast Wednesday, October 13 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9 (rebroadcast Saturday, October 16 at 6 p.m.). Nova has moved to Wednesdays as part of Public Tv 9's Arts and Sciences evening.

Nova has joined the hundreds of women and men from many nations who spend their time working in the frozen wastes of Antarctica. The reason for the cold spot's popularity is the ice — which provides a perfect record of the atmosphere over the last 100,000 years.

In this "gigantic refrigerator of the past," Nova looks at the survival of life, from bugs to penguins. And Nova talks with the Antarctic workers, who survive the six months' long winters of total darkness.

MARGARET LLOYD, previously known as Miss Margaret, the Romper Room teacher on Channel 11, is the new hostess of Calendar, a live, morning interview show which airs Monday-Friday.

Pirandello Play Featured

Six Characters in Search of An Author by Luigi Pirandello will air on Public TV 9 Monday, October 11 at 9 p.m., as part of Hollywood Television Theatre's new season. Andy Griffith, John Houseman and Julie Adams head of the cast in this modern, controversial classic that argues the theme of reality versus illusion.

The play opens as actors, their director, and a crew begin rehearsal of a play and six characters mysteriously appear, claiming their story is more interesting than the play at hand. The conflict between actors and characters provides the basis for an exciting theatrical study of reality versus illusion — a concept which has exerted considerable influence on the course of 20th century drama.

Stacy Keach, perhaps most famous for his acting, directs Six Characters. His work is highly regarded by Hollywood Television Theatre executive producer Norman Lloyd: "Stacy Keach has won as many rave reviews from critics as any of the most talented actors of his generation.". Two seasons back, Keach directed another play for Hollywood Television Theatre, Arthur Miller's Incident at Vichy. Lloyd calls that play "one of our finest productions."

Andy Griffith, who plays the father, mused after the production was taped that "Pirandello is a far piece from Mayberry RFD." He confessed to being nervous over his role but, according to director Keach and producer Lloyd, "gives a stunning performance," "Reading it, you accept it on one level," explains Griffith, "and doing it you discover lots of things on different levels — it becomes very complex, very fascinating."

Joining Griffith is John Houseman, who has been producing and directing for more than fifty years. He burst upon the public as an actor at the age of 70, portraying the autocratic professor of law in "Paper Chase" and won an Oscar for his efforts. Since then, he has appeared in several movies, as well as PBS' THE ADAMS CHRONICLES. Completely happy with his new career, Houseman says: "I must say, I am delighted to be in demand as an actor." Houseman plays the role of "director" in Pirandello's play.

Julie Adams, who plays the mother, made her motion picture debut in Bright Victory with Arthur Kennedy, and won a contract at Universal. Her major television appearances include Cannon, Marcus Welby, Ironside, and the recent Movie of the Week, Go Ask Alice.

Oktoberfest Parade Aired on Channel 8

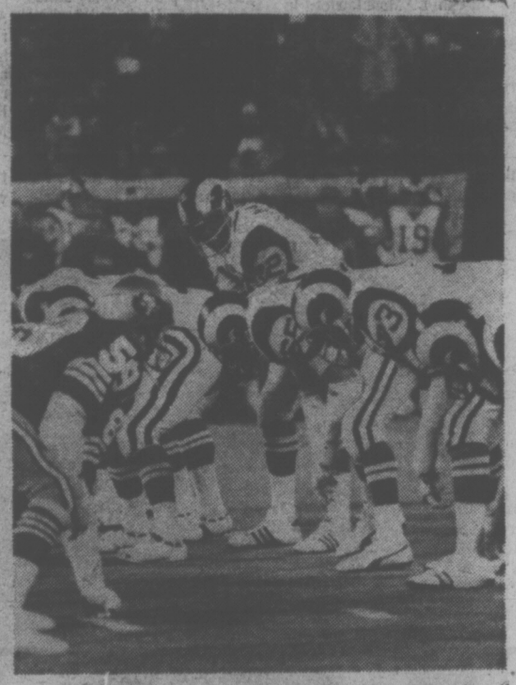
The warmth and camaraderie of Kitchener-Waterloo's annual Oktoberfest celebration are captured on The Oktoberfest Parade, Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 11, at 10 a.m. on Channel 8.

Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, this year's Parade Marshall, leads the colorful 3-mile parade through the main streets of the twin cities of Kitchener and Waterloo. Over 40 lavishly decorated floats depict Oktoberfest and Thanksgiving Day themes, and clattery "brau" wagons, oompah bands, dancers and marchers, many in traditional German dress, salute the cities' strong German heritage.

Jim Perry, host of CTV's Headline Hunters and Definition, and CKCO-TV's Betty Thompson, Chairman of the Oktoberfest Women's Committee, describe the floats and share a sense of the parade's excitment, friendliness and pageantry with the television audience.

Kitchener-Waterloo's annual Oktoberfest is now North America's largest Bavarian festival and ranks second in size to Munich's famous event. But Oktoberfest and the Oktoberfest Parade are much more than just events, they're a mood of friendship, warmth and togetherness the German's call "Gemutlichkeit".

The Oktoberfest Parade is produced by CKCO-TV, CTV's Kitchener affiliate.



LOS ANGELES quarterback James Harris (12), who has one of the strongest throwing arms in the NFL, leads the Rams against the San Francisco '49ers in Los Angeles Monday, Oct. 11, at 7 p.m. on ABC's NFL Monday Night Football, Channel 4. Harris will be going against Jim Plunkett, who is in his first year with the '49ers after starring at Stanford and then launching a pro career with New England. Reporting all the NFL action — ABC's Frank Gifford, Howard Cosell and Alex Karras.

Gandhi's Roles Probed

Mrs. Gandhi's India, a one-hour special devoted to the Iron Lady Prime Minister of the Subcontinent, will be shown on Public TV 9 Tuesday, October 12 at 10 p.m. The program includes an extensive interview between Mrs. Gandhi and British journalist-producer Anthony Mayer plus a studio segment anchored by Martin Agronsky.

The interview covers a wide range of topics, most of them revolving around Mrs. Gandhi's increasingly dictatorial leadership. She explains her position not in terms of power, but in terms of service to her people in trying to persuade them to follow particular directions she feels are beneficial for the country. She considers her restrictions on personal liberties and freedom of the press as mere restraints used to "prevent any group from doing harm" to the nation and firmly maintains that "what is more important than any individual freedom is the existence of the country."

Mrs. Gandhi shows little but scorn for those outside India that criticize her dismantling of democratic institutions and ideals. She insists that England and other Western nations have no business meddling in the affairs of her country as she attempts to salvage it.

The interview probes many of Mrs. Gandhi's roles and throughout, she maintains the calm assurance of one firmly in control of her destiny.

Pop Goes Revolution

The Soviet Union's greatest rock star, the communist King of Pop, Dean Reed, discusses his music and politics with correspondent Michael Maclear on "Pop Goes The Revolution," Thursday, October 4, 9:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

"Reed's concerts are happy, hippie-like sell-outs," states doctrinating while entertaining.

"Any artist, has the means to arrive at the eyes, ears, heads and minds of millions of people", Reed states. "To me it's not a business . . . it's a cause and I use my guitar as a rifle, I hope."

In Eastern Europe and Soviet Russia, the Communists arediscovering the political use of the once verboten, rock music. When the Ministry of Culture O.K'd "Pop" to spread communist ideology, it meant someone would gain sudden recognition. Being an American, Dean Reed had an added appeal.

Reed was popular in South America in the early '60's, gaining adulation and stardom with his hit "Our Summer Romance". It was in Latin America that he found his "cause".

Reed toured have-not nations for 15 years, then proceeded to Moscow. After marrying a German, he settled in East Berlin. In addition to his residence in the walled city, he rents a lakeside villa and runs 2 cars and a motor boat.

"His songs and lifestyle contrast," Maclear says.

Reed refuses to disclose his annual salary, arguing that this is a question from his past, when he lived in societies where a person's worth was measured by financial status.

"I live no better than other famous people in a socialist system," states Reed. "I think the value of a man is what he does."

Although not permitted to put Beethoven to rock, Reed denies censorship. "I follow my own conscience, no matter what the consequences. It just happens that I agree more with the system here than I agree with the system in the west.

"I am ready also," Reed says, "to go to prison myself, and if it means putting my life on the line, someday I will do it. I would go any place where the progressive movement would say, Dean come back and help us."

In his own mind, Dean Reed is a hero, a self-appointed revolutionary. He does not view himself as just another asset in the present 5-year plan, although he admits many people feel his songs are too political — the crowd wants more "rock and roll."

Foreman Faces Dino Dennis

George Foreman, former Heavyweight Champion of the World, meets Dino Dennis in a scheduled 12-round heavyweight bout, co-featured with the fight for the Lightweight Championship of the World between defending champion Robert Duran and Alvero Rojas, scheduled for 15 rounds, with both fights to be broadcast live by CBS Sports from the Hollywood Sportorium in Hollywood Florida, Friday, October 15 at 8 p.m. on channels 7 and 12.

The combative and controversial Foreman, who has one of the most impressive records in boxing, waits for a shot at the winner of the September 28 heavyweight title fight between Muhammad Ali and Ken Norton. In 50 fights, including the recent Scot LeDoux bout, broadcast on CBS Sports Spectacular, in which Foreman TKO'd LeDoux in three rounds, the former champion has recorded 39 KO's with only one loss, and eight-round knockout at the hands of Ali two years ago. Included in that record is a two-round knockout of Norton in 1974, when Foreman was still champion. He won the title by knocking out Frazier in the second round of a bout in 1973.

Dennis is considered the best heavyweight to come out of New England since Rocky Marciano, and has scored 14 knockouts in 27 fights, with one draw. Duran, regarded as one of the ring's deadliest punchers, successfully defended his crown against Leontco Ortiz in a bout broadcast live on "CBS Sports Spectacular" last December. The upcoming bout on October 15 will be Duran's seventh defense of the title he won in Madison Square Garden on June 26, 1972 against Ken Buchanan. In 51 fights he has scored 41 knockouts, with one loss (an over-the-weight match in November 1972 against Estaban DeJesus.) He subsequently knocked out DeJesus in a title match on March 16, 1974.

Rojas, ranked 10th by the World Boxing Council, is in his mid-20's and is a better than average boxer with a good jab and power in both hands. In a recent bout, he lost a 10-rounder to top junior lightweight Antonio Amaya.

A DESPAIRING young woman is seen in Michelangelo Antonioni's L'Eclipse. The absorbing drama will be shown on Thursday, Oct. 14, at 9 p.m. on Channel 9. Monica Vitti is the young woman in this Italian-French-made movie.

KARL MALDEN, as Lt. Mike Stone, smiles at his daughter, Jean (Darleen Carr), who is angry after he voiced objections to her friendship with a motorcycle officer whose methods Stone disapproves, in Hot Dog, on the ABC Television Network's The Streets of San Francisco, Thursday, Oct. 14, at 10 p.m. on Channel 4. Stone's young partner, Inspector Dan Robbins (Richard Hatch), is a bystander during the exchange.

They Are Normal Children, Some Earn $10,000 a Day

By CONNIE GRZELKA

NEW YORK (AP) — They're normal children who go to school, ride bikes and play ball.

But they also earn anywhere from $200 up to $5,000 or $10,000 in a day.

They're the kids who appear on television commercials. There are hundreds in the business, says Mari Lyn Henry, associate casting director at an advertising agency, who sees close to 300 of them a year.

Mrs. Henry, who has worked with both children and adults for the past seven years at Cunningham and Walsh, describes her work with youngsters as "a special, human experience. They're always full of surprises."

Most of the children in the business are the "natural performers" who are extroverted and like to entertain, she says. The others are "cute children" who their parents think should be on television, she adds.

The kids come in all sizes, types and ages, from infancy to 10. Since youngsters tire easily, have a shorter attention span and may be self-conscious, Ms. Henry says that auditioning requires patience and an awareness of the child's needs.

Some of the children say they want to be stars when they start doing commercials, explains Ms. Henry. "But it's a fantasy. When they find out how much work is involved, many quickly change their minds."

But child stars don't just walk in off the street. They must have an agent before the casting department will see them, Ms. Henry emphasizes.

Books

A new book by Gabrielle Roy is always an event, but I'm slightly puzzled as to what to make of Enchanted Summer. "Warmly received by its French audience" (so runs the dust jacket blurb) and now available in an English translation by Joyce Marshall, Enchanted Summer consists of 125 pages and 19 short pieces about such homely and rustic subjects as bullfrogs, cows and crows.

It's overpriced at $7.95 and too sentimental to interest the generality of readers. It's also anthropomorphic enough to set natural history enthusiasts foaming at the mouth. The only conceivable public for this book in my opinion, then, is the reader who is so under Gabrielle Roy's spell already that he or she will be willing to absorb the good things Enchanted Summer has to offer and ignore the rest.

Some of these good things include Roy's characterization of Long Skinny Minny, that "scrawny attenuated cat with a crooked tail (who) eventually wore people down." (In one evening, says Roy, she's seen Long Skinny Minny escorted to the door 20 or 30 times.) When the cat shocks Roy and her friend Berthe with a brilliant display of rail walking ("She passed us easily, tail held high"), we are delighted. We also chuckle at the tricks played by little Mouffette, the cat who plays hide-and-seek and we are touched by Roy's description of Prince, the lonely horse.

The best piece in the book is surely Roy's account of her first experience as a teacher, when she took over a one-roomed school in a "very poor village" in Manitoba for the month of June. "I myself was hardly more than a child," she writes. Her charges were mostly metis, "beautiful and exquisitely polite" and with "nothing to reproach them for except the inconceivable distance they maintained between themselves and me."

It turns out that one of their classmates, a serious, studious child named Yolande, has just died of T.B. Roy's description of how she felt her way into the children's confidence, questioning them and suggesting they visit the dead girl together, is finely and delicately drawn and very moving indeed.

But the mood of sadness and pessimism it evokes sits oddly with the reader after this light-hearted saunter through Roy's predominantly sunny, pastoral world of the "enchanted summer". The concluding pieces in the book, one about islands and their mysterious fascination, the other about a visit to the home of a deceased friend (a bullfrog named Monsieur Tooing, in fact), seem tacked on in an unsuccessful attempt to make the book hang together.

Other drawbacks include the author's persistent playfulness, which at first amuses, later wears thin and ultimately grates. ("I don't know why cows are called stupid. The expression of these three, as they examined me closely and noted details, clearly shows a sort of reflection. 'Ah good. It's the lady from the summer cottage on the way again to our master's' ", etc. . . . "there wasn't a human being amongst us who would have dreamed for a moment of taking (the kildeer's) eggs or later, their poor little nestlings. Yet what a summer of misery we spent! Always on the alert. Always on the watch."

Still, Roy's obvious affection for the earth and its creatures is something we would do well to share, and her graceful prose style can reward the attentive reader whatever her subject.

Reading Enchanted Summer made me turn again to a book I consider a classic in the field of Canadian nature writing: Sheila Burnford's collection of essays, Fields of Noon. Published in hardcover by McClelland and Stewart in 1964, it has never, I believe, been reissued. My own copy was picked up at a rummage sale for 50 cents and I cherish it immensely.

Here's a sample passage picked almost at random: (She is somewhere in northern Manitoba or Saskatchewan, ostensibly duck-hunting) "Then one day, lying on my back beside a little slough, half asleep in the noonday sun, a safe half-section removed from my companions' ears, a raven passed overhead, and cawed. Unbidden, effortless, up from the depths of my soul and out through my mouth emerged and soared through the skies a hoarse raucous reply of such apparent accuracy and import that the raven, after a surprised glance behind, lowered his altitude by several feet and inquired where I was. 'Here,' I croaked harshly. 'Where, where?' cawed the bird, puzzled but still losing height . . ."

With Burnford, an intense joy in nature is filtered through a fine ironic screen. She makes Gabrielle Roy's sensitive musings sound almost child-like.

A Fine and Gentle Memoir

By WALTER YOUNG

Victorians will always have a soft spot in their hearts for Bruce Hutchison, partly because he has been such a tenacious inhabitant, defying the sirens of the East who would tempt him to Ottawa, Winnipeg, and, God forgive them, even to Vancouver. But Hutchison would have none of it. He never left his garden in high Quadra and his camp at Shawnigan Lake for longer than he could help and refused all permanent commitments that, however exalted they might be, would have taken him away from southern Vancouver Island. Such devotion is enough to endear anyone to dedicated Victorians.

More than that, however, his columns and his cartoons quickly established him as the city's leading journalist. He was a gentle chronicler of the madness that has passed for a legislature in British Columbia since Confederation. In 1918 he started his career in journalism with the Daily Times. Within a few years he was legislative reporter for the Times and the Vancouver Province. Anyone who has studied the provincial house during the twenties and thirties has cause to bless Hutchison; his regular column on each day's sitting more than makes up for the lack of a Hansard.

Legislative reporters today ignore the personalities that were meat and drink to Hutchison. The issues were the stuff of news columns, the conflict between Patullo, Anscombe, and, latterly, Ernest and Harold Winch, was the subject matter of Hutchison's columns. And when they were not peopled with the giants of that great provincial forum, Mrs. Alfred Noggins and Horace Snifkin took their places to air the views of the simpler folk.

Simple though the Noggins' and Snifkins might be, they were, at bottom, good Liberals as their creator was then and, it is clear, remains to this day. Not, it must be said, the most devoted follower of the present leader of that party, who is perhaps the least characteristic of all Liberal leaders.

HUTCHISON
. . . sirens rebuffed

Bruce Hutchison believes in the inevitability of competition and of private enterprise, as they are defined in the Liberal lexicon. But it would be a mistake to take this to mean his political theory is merely a reflection of his political preference. Unlike many political reporters, Hutchison has had the advantage of close friendship with many of the power brokers and the power-holders on both sides of the 49th parallel. His conversations with some of the giants are reflected in his columns and it is clear that his concept of liberalism has kept pace with the times.

But for all that Hutchison clung to his native heath, there is relatively little in this book about politics in British Columbia. The memories that are brightest for him are those of major events and major figures in Ottawa and Washington, D.C. In fact it seems from this book that in many ways the latter of the two is his intellectual if not his spiritual home. In some respects that makes sense for a writer whose subject is Liberal English Canada: it is not too far from the mark to assert that to understand the politics of Anglo Saxon Canada one must also understand the politics of the United States. Hutchison's continentalism helped him to understand that part of Canada he wrote about and knew best. The truly unknown country remains Quebec.

Victorians who have been followers of Hutchison's columns will not want to miss The Far Side of the Street. It is a fine and gentle memoir of a major figure in Canadian journalism and letters. It includes interesting vignettes of Victoria in the early years of the century, some engaging references to the author's family and friends, and a large measure of the kind of political anecdote that only someone with Hutchison's access to the Liberal throne room could have written.

Violence For Its Own Sake

By JUDITH BURKETT

A new genre of books and movies has appeared since Daniel Ellsberg released the Pentagon Papers. The identifying characteristics of this literary genus are high adventure, convoluted plotting, incredible stakes and two-word titles, the first word of which is either a name or an initial with the second word usually referring to documents, files, tapes, microdots . . . that sort of thing. And they are also invariably violent in the extreme.

In a remarkable departure Robert Ludlum's usual first-word-name format (his other four titles are: The Scarlatti Inheritance, The Osterman Weekend, The Matlock Paper and The Rhinemann Exchange) the word Gemini is not a name or even a birth sign (no Age-of-Aquarian, he) but actually refers to twins, Andrew and Adrian Fontaine. They are trying to recover, naturally, a document (SIC), this one written by St. Peter, no less, concerning Christ Himself How high a stake can you get?

The story begins late in 1939 as the Nazi threat is beginningto get out of hand. In the opening scenes, the only truly gripping passages of the book, monks of an ancient Greek order are transporting by train an iron vault, property of the monastery for 15 centuries and said to contain documents which will rend the Christian world if ever revealed. They are taking the sacred papers to safety in Switzerland under cover of night, to be delivered to an influential Italian, Savarone Fontini-Cristi, who will bury them . . . somewhere.

He never gets a chance to tell where, though, because the Gestapo guns the whole family down, kiddies, grandmums and all. All, that is, except Vittorio, Salvatore's son, who is hiding in the bushes close enough to hear the old man shout out the one and only clue. The prodigal Vittorio, thoroughly reformed by the realization that "war is hell", is spirited to England by Apple and Pear, agents of M16. Actually, spirited is hardly the word. A more obvious trail of blood and guts couldn't have been left by a bulldozer in a stockyard.

Suffice it to say that Vittorio changes his name to Fontine, marries a cute chick, moves to the States, has twin sons and quits the scene. The twins, Adrian and Andrew, carry on the good fight in 1973 and, to make a very involved story very short, the documents are found and their authenticity is confirmed. But when the world stays intact, it's rather a letdown after all those corpses.

Perhaps Ludlum is trying to make a point about violence being nasty. If so he should write a story specifically about violence. But this is not a story about violence, only a story which inevitably would have violence in it. But all that much? Perhaps I will be accused of being unrealistic, because, "After all, war is hell!." Yes, it is, but it is not an excuse. Violence for its own sake is merely evil.

THE GEMINI CONTENDERS, by Robert Ludlum. Beaverbooks. $10.50.

The Drift of History

A book with the uninspiring title, The Shadow of the Winter Palace, has proved to be not only an unexpected surprise but one of the three most satisfying non-fiction works I have read this year.

Edward Crankshaw, eminent journalist (The Observer, London), scholar, and one of the world's leading experts on Russia, has produced an erudite, diligently researched, yet astonishingly easy to read exposition of the drift of events in Russia from 1825 to the inevitability of the 1917 Revolution.

Crankshaw concerns himself with the reigns of the last four tsars, but the stage is set by reviewing the conduct of an earlier tsar, Alexander 1, whose army of conscripted and despised serfs defeated Napoleon and pursued the beaten French to Paris.

Alexander, tyrant ruler of all the Russians, thereupon elected to become the liberal reformer of Europe. But while he preached enlightenment abroad he entrusted the overlordship of Russia to the arch-reactionary brute, the sinister Count Arakcheyev. Crankshaw shows how, by permitting his more intelligent officers and his serfs to taste the freedom of Europe and then return to oppression, Alexander speeded up the revolutionary process he most dreaded.

The beginning of the end came with the Decembrist revolt in 1825 outside the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg — on the very day Alexander's successor, Nicholas 1, became Tsar. That revolt, led by liberal army officers, was put down ruthlessly, and Nicholas responded in time-honored fashion by instituting greater oppression.

Paradoxically (and Russian history is one long paradox), the illiterate, ill-fed, viciously treated serfs, who comprised nine-tenths of the population, clung even more tenaciously to their blind belief in the goodness of the Tsar.

They had no alternative. Russia then, as now, was ruled vertically. Serfs were owned by landowners whose overlords, the governors, were nobles appointed by, and answerable only to, the Tsar.

But the Tsar, with plenty of precedents to warn him, feared a palace revolution and was in fact a prisoner of the very nobles who feared him. Nicholas 1, according to Crankshaw, wanted to emancipate the serfs but did not dare for fear of upsetting the landowners and the unenlightened nobility. Thus the emperor had no clothes.

Nicholas 1, who rightly commands most of the space in this enthralling book, concentrated his attention on his army. It became a mania: he designed uniforms, knew every button on every tunic, even assigned new recruits to regiments. Drilling entire regiments became an obsession.

His dream, says Crankshaw, was of a Utopia in which all men were organized in a blessed hierarchy commanded by the Tsar, who only took orders from God. From an army with a rigid chain of command and absolute obedience, it was only a short step to believing that this was also the model to which civilian society must aspire.

Crankshaw makes clear that Nicholas never understood that the Decembrist revolt was not a military uprising but a conspiracy of loyal founding members of a new intelligentsia, who were army officers solely because the army offered the only respected career for a young man of good birth. Had he understood this he could have undermined in advance the work of the officers' successors, the intellectuals of the new and rootless bourgoisie, who had no loyalty to the Tsar at all.

But a ruler who is all-powerful, without controls, without advisers, without guidance, trusts no man and cannot tolerate the conception of any autonomous or quasi-autonomous institutions. And Nicholas the archetypal autocrat, was all-powerful. He was Caesar, commander-in-chief, head of the Church, head of government (prime minister, foreign minister, in fact effective head of each separate government department), chief of police, and father of all serfs. He was everything, and therefore nothing.

Because society was hopelessly fragmented, unified only in the person of the Tsar, there was no public opinion, no feedback as we would say. Literary censorship was harsh, as deadly as that under Stalin; even enlightened editors were persecuted, either sent into exile or, in one case, pronounced insane and sent to a medical institution.

The result was that Nicholas operated in limbo. Mild reforms ordered by him were not carried out and continued oppression by landowners led to increasing uprisings, which were suppressed by greater oppression. Nicholas was told of the revolts and endorsed the punishments, but he was never made aware of the root causes.

And so Russia was left behind in the European Industrial Revolution — a vast, backward land whose human potential lay untapped and seething with discontent. The miserable serfs were not alone in their frustration. Even brilliant young members of the nobility and landed gentry had nowhere to go but the armed services. Tolstoy served in the army, as did Mussorgsky; Rimsky-Korsakov was a naval lieutenant; Borodin was an army doctor and chemist.

An unhappy land with a magnificent parade-ground army being ignominously defeated in the Crimea was Nicholas' legacy to his heir, Alexander 11.

Alexander, the most intelligent of all the Romanovs, which isn't saying very much, thought he could free the serfs without diluting autocratic power and conduct. The intelligentsia, searching for a national identity, urged reform (Tolstoy's contribution was War and Peace) but radicals saw reform, particularly in education, as part of the hated system and therefore something to be resisted.

Poor, misguided Alexander was actually assassinated by radicals on the very day he signed an order for the creation of the first representative body designed to reflect public opinion.

His successor, Alexander III, was a ruthless tyrant who seized the opportunity afforded by the assassination to establish the first police-state. It was a disastrous policy as it united the opposition. The bourgeois elite, deprived of political activity, naturally supported revolutionaries against the autocracy and its bureaucracy which had left them out in the cold. And the intelligentsia gave to revolution their blessing.

Alexander III had the strength to cling to the reins and maintain a semblance of order, but his successor, the ill-fated Nicholas II, was a weakling who earnestly believed he was placed on the throne by God and needed to do nothing but be.

The end came during the First World War when the serf-army was incited to mutiny by radical agitators. Nicholas went to the Front, leaving Russia to be ruled by the Empress Alexandra, who dominated him and was in turn dominated by the sinister monk, Rasputin, who actually named his unsavory cronies to cabinet posts. The stupidities continued to the end — and Lenin waited in the wings . . .

The central theme of Crankshaw's spell-binding chronological narrative is that Tsarist Russia had within it the seeds, not only of the catastrophe of 1917, but also of many aspects of modern Russia which we are apt to think of as peculiar to the communist state.

The Russian character and behavior which we find perplexing or alarming, had counterparts in Tsarist times. Crankshaw refers repeatedly to the peculiar Russian quality of equivocation and apathy, which even today renders Russian motives more impenetrable than most.

It becomes clear from reading this book that autocracy, whether monarchial or dictatorial, has been imposed on Russians in response to a popular demand. It was not an active demand, of course, and the people didn't like what they got, but throughout history, whenever the people had the chance to become masters of their own fate they made no determined effort to speak out, and so were duly punished for their silence.

Over the centuries, the autocratic system so corrupted Russian society that the silent demand for it became an open need.

Since the Revolution, it has been an imposed man-made catechism, the insolent simplification by a man of action (Lenin) of the teaching of a great German philosopher-economist (Karl Marx) who, never let it be forgotten, knew next to nothing about people.

Perhaps Crankshaw's greatest contribution to our learning lies in his emphasis on the interplay between the autocracy and intelligentsia — the latter at first operating in a vacuum, then harnessed to a revolutionary movement which finally destroyed it.

The reason, forcefully underlined by Crankshaw, is that men who detest revolution will always link with revolutionaries when an autocracy refuses to admit the difference between a revolutionary; bent on its destruction and a liberal seeking to reform it.

Churchill's description of Russia as "a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma" still stands, but this fine book goes a long way to explain the reason why.

How the 'Best Years' Turned to 'Greed Years'

By JULIAN REID

On August 15, 1945, when the Japanese surrender brought the Second World War to a close, Joseph C. Goulden was 11 years old—a more-or-less typical all-American boy, growing up in the small-town isolation of Marshall, East Texas. On June 25, 1950, when the North Korean army swarmed southward across the 38th Parallel, he was 16—a high school student now, eagerly looking forward to escaping the confines of Marshall into the wider world beyond. In the course of those five years, that world had been transformed.

Two decades later Goulden, now an investigative reporter, found himself thinking back to that formative period in his own life and that of his country. "Someday, I said to myself, I'd like to go back and learn what I missed as a child." His casual nostalgia matured gradually into The Best Years, in which he attempts to recreate the atmosphere and concerns which animated the postwar U.S.A.

"I can look back at that period now and say they truly were 'the best years,'" says Harold Russell, the ex-paratrooper and double amputee who won an Oscar for his memorable portrayal of a returning veteran in the 1946 film, The Best Years of Our Lives. "The guys who came out of World War II were idealistic. They sincerely believed they were coming home to build a new world."

That idealism was authentic. But it was founded, as Goulden shrewdly observes, on a solidly material bedrock. "The collective overriding postwar ambition—the practical wish, once you got beneath the folderol about 'building a better world' and 'preserving lasting peace,' the high-flown sentiments voiced more by editorial writers than by the people who actually are America—was to ride around in a new automobile."

Idealism and materialism—those were the two poles between which the American spirit hung suspended in the years immediately following the war. Materialism won out. By the end of the decade the U.S. had achieved "a material well-being unsurpassed in the prior history of mankind"—but only at the expense of a subtly corrosive disillusionment with the high-principled liberalism that had inspired not only the editorial writers of 1945, but also the New Deal of the 1930s and the increasingly troubled United Nations Organization, in whose collective cause the recent war had ostensibly been fought.

By 1950, as the Cold War flamed hot in Korea and the demagogic Senator Joseph L. McCarthy tooled up for the Red-baiting witch-hunt that was presently to set the tone for the Fearful Fifties, the "best years" for Americans were unmistakably over. Materially, life would grow better yet; but spiritually the new decade would be stamped with a soul-stifling conformity, uplifted by frequent flights of self-righteously patriotic paranonia.

In contrast, the preceding five years seem virtually an age of innocence—as every era seems when viewed in retrospect, perhaps because what it takes to end an era is a breakdown of the illusions which once sustained it. It is the superficial innocence of the vanished past, as reflected in its unassumingly trivial pastimes, which inspires in us the most powerful nostalgia—a nostalgia to which, alas, Goulden's account does scant justice.

Conscientiously enough, he attempts to deal with the films and best-sellers of the period, the raucous swan-song of network radio and the first clumsy stirrings of the new giant, television. Such are the subtle seasonings which combine to create the distinctive flavor of an age; but Goulden's treatment of them lacks the evanescent sparkle it takes to bring them truly back to life.

But when it comes to the headlines of the day, and the large-scale social and political forces which looomed behind them, Goulden's extensive muckraking experience stands him in excellent stead. Though The Best Years fails to capture the golden aura which makes Harold Russell and so many others recollect the late '40s as indeed the best years of their lives, it succeeds admirably in explaining why that luminous Indian summer was inevitably doomed to an unseasonable end.

THE BEST YEARS: 1945-1950, by Joseph C. Goulden. McClelland & Stewart. $14.50.

The sharpest, brightest picture money can buy!

Other televisions can't be as sharp or bright as Luminar 1 because other televisions don't have a full-beam color system. Luminar 1 has a totally unitized gun. Which allows for wider focusing lenses, and, consequently, fuller color beams than conventional systems. All the color gets onto the screen. All the time. If you're ready to buy a new color set, make sure you get the sharpest brightest picture for your money — the Luminar 1 by Hitachi, from City Centre TV. Come and see for yourself!
